DESOLATION AND DEATH

REIGN IN ST. PIERRE, THE CITY OF 40,000 DEAD.

Roofless Houses and Cavernous Windows Strike Terror to the Hearts of Sightseers—Vegetation Now Covering Many Ruins—It Was the Wickedest Spot in the Whole West Indies—Only One Man Escaped.

"It is men, not walls, that make a city," the Greek maxim ran, and more, it is living men, writes a correspondent of The London Times. For the walls of St. Pierre are there still, and probably no fewer than 40,000 of its inhabitants are there also. But they have been asleep these eight years now. And it is extraordinarily impressive, this white, sightless skeleton of a dead city.

In orderly rows the houses stand as seen from the sea, the streets rising in tier upon well graded tier back from the shore to the hills. But every street is silent, every house roofless, every window cavernous and blind.

Before us as we land lies the wide paved street which runs along the parallel to the waterfront. "And there," says the ship's officer who is my guide and counsellor, "was the wickedest spot in the whole West Indies. That row of houses, pink and white, to the left. The French nature, you know, away from the restraints of home, with the ignorance and docility of the blacks. It is a bad combination."

There are legends now of blasphemous rites which were in progress when the "fire from the Lord out of heaven" was rained down — legends which have probably grown up since the event. But there seems to have been good ground for that description, "the wickedest spot in the West Indies." And of over 40,000 people who were presumably in the city at the time only one man escaped, prisoner under sentence of death for murder confined in a cell impervious to the flames and fumes, and he only escaped to die of the shock a few days later.

Fifty yards of a narrow cross street bring us to what was once the chief business thoroughfare of St. Pierre. Wide and straight it runs for a mile in either direction, the roadway flagged with blocks of stone, fair and smooth, to where on each side the gutters are now green ribbons of herbage. Then the high curb rises, and beyond it the broad paved sidewalk (for the French build their colonial cities better than we) reaches to the straight, clean, orderly frontage of the stone built shops. Straight and orderly the line of the shop fronts still stands—the fronts only, with gaping doorways and empty windows.

Here and there, still fixed in the heavy masonry, the rusted clamps and pins show where doors were hung and window shutters fastened, but beyond the bare incombustible stone and metal not a fragment or shred of wood or glass or fabric remains of all the bravery of what was once perhaps the gayest and most fashionable shopping street in the West Indies. Now and again one gathers indications of what kind of stock was carried in this shop or that.

Here a mass of what was once coiled chain, now fused to a solid lump of metal, suggests that this was an ironwood or glass or fabric remains of all the bravery of what was once perhaps the gayest and most fashionable shopping street in the West Indies. Now and again one gathers indications of what kind of stock was carried in this shop or that.

Here a mass of what was once coiled chain, now fused to a solid lump of metal, suggests that this was an iron-monger's. There the wreckage of a massive safe inside the wide windows, framed for display, makes it likely that a jeweler thrived. But for the most part each building is full, choked to the roof, with ash and volcanic dust, dreadful to see, but merciful perhaps, for under it, buried deep, are things that one does not care to think of. No life, no perishable material survived that first strifling, withering blast, then came the rain of dust and ashes, covering all things as for the most part they remain hidden to this day.

And more mercifully yet nature in the tropics is prolific. Whatever man holds he holds only by keeping the vegetable armies at bay; wherever he retreats the ranks of the green things advance. From the hill slopes on all sides vegetation has pushed its way among the ruins. Seeds have been borne by the winds or dropped by birds, or having long lain dormant in crevices of houses and in the uncongenial earth of the city, have now thrust up through the overlying layer of debris to the air. In every interstice, overhanging every wall from where the roofs once were, a mantle of foliage and blossoming shrubs has been drawn over the whole dead city.

Each straight paved street, with the white walls on either hand, is little more than a pergola, a grotto, an avenue cut through the green.

In the cemetery the tombstones lie split by the heat and twisted from their beds, and the monuments lie strewn broken on the ground, but it has little meaning now, this place where the resting places of a few hundred dead were honored with monuments of marble and granite, while all around in the city which is one vast cemetery lie 40,000 dead unmarked.

My ship's officer told me that he knew St. Pierre well before it was stricken, and no less than once a year since then he has been able to put in here and come ashore, and at each visit he has seen how nature has gained upon the town. In a few more years the streets will all be overgrown, the masonry buried in green and the forest growth will have pushed its way down to the shore.

This is one of the islands where the dread snake, the Fer de Lance, is found. In just such a broken wilderness as this, where under the flowers and the butterflies the wreckage of the city offers strange dark hiding places, it will love to make its home. Then few people will care to push their way through the thick growth among the ruins. Ships will content themselves with passing off shore, and passengers will be shown from a distance the place where once St. Pierre stood. But a little more and a generation will arise to which the story of the disaster is but a tradition, and the very site of the wickedest spot in the West Indies will be forgotten, its memory overgrown with myth and legend, even as the ruins of the city itself are already half submerged in flowers and green leaves.

Looking out of his cabin window two miles from Cobalt, near Clear Lake Henry Drapau saw a little girl running down the road with a big black bear close behind. For selling adulterated pepper, three Kingston grocers, were called upon, in the police court on Tuesday morning, to pay a fine of $10 and costs each. The charge was laid by an inspector from the inland revenue department. The three grocers pleaded guilty, but explained to the court, that they did not know that the pepper was adulterated, that they had purchased it in good faith, as it had been guaranteed by the wholesales, to be pure.

King Barleycorn provides over half the male population for the state insane asylums and over a fifth of the females according to Dr. Albert Warren Ferris, president of the State Lunacy Commission. This conclusion was reached after a special study of 961 cases in the Manhattan state hospital in which the causation was accurately determined. Alcohol was found to be the precipitating factor in fifty-five per cent of the men and twenty-two per cent of the women.

The Canadian Associated Press has every reason to believe that it is intended that the Duke of Connaught shall be Governor-General of Canada, in accordance with King Edward's expressed wish. It is unlikely, however, that the official announcement will be made at present, for the Duke of Connaught is to open the South African Parliament at the end of the year, and it is improbable that he will come to Canada in midwinter. It is, therefore, proposed that Earl Grey remain in office till the spring of 1911.

Sanitarians are highly pleased over the series of "healthograms"—epigrams relating to sanitation and health—that are being issued by Dr. W. E. Evans, Chicago's commissioner of health. Here are a few sample bricks: "Filth for flies and flies for fever." "When you don't know what to eat—eat nothing." "Dark living rooms speedily plant candles in your head." "Teasing baby to make it laugh is a crying shame." "The birth of a fly may mean the death of a baby." "Kill the flies and save the babies." "A heap of rubbish about your house is a tombstone to your self-respect and civic pride."

OBITUARY.

Louise E. Smith, the subject of this sketch, was the relict of the late Elias Smith, of North Fredericksburgh. Her maiden name was Louise E. Canfield. She was born in the Town of Mayfield, New York State, on Aug. 8th, 1835. Her parents were Abram and Nancy Canfield of the same place. She came to Canada about 1852 and resided with her uncle, M. D. Canfield, at Morven. She was married to Elias Smith in 1857, who predeceased her about twenty-seven years. Her life has since been passed on the old homestead until the time of her death on June 5th, 1910. She had been ailing for some years and latterly about four years, she had suffered from chronic bronchitis. Her final suffering, however, lasted only about one week, when she passed away to her eternal home. The funeral service was held in the White Church, Morven, on Tuesday, June 7th, being conducted by Rev. Geo. McConnell, who preached an appropriate sermon from Jer. 12th chap. and 5th verse, and the body of our deceased sister was placed in the vault to be removed later to the last resting place where she will await the resurrection morn. Mrs. Smith came from a family of six, consisting of three brothers, two sisters and herself, four of whom preceded her to the better land, leaving one brother living in Fort Dodge, Iowa, and one sister living in Johnstown, New York. Of her own family who reached maturity there were two, both of whom are living, Harvey, who lived with his mother and who still occupies the old homestead, and Mrs. Netta Gordanier, who lives on the York road near Fairview school-house. In religion Mrs. Smith was a Methodist, having united with the church about 1866, remaining a member of the church of her choice until the time of her death.

MRS. THOMAS TRIMBLE.

A terribly sudden death occurred on Sunday last, when Mrs. Thos. Trimble passed away: after but a few hours' illness. About 5 o'clock on Saturday evening Mrs. Trimble was doing some baking and being in need of some supplies asked her daughter, Miss Helen to go down town for the same. On her return about twenty minutes later Miss Trimble found her mother lying on a couch unconscious. Doctors were immediately summoned but nothing could be done for the sufferer and she passed away on Sunday morning without regaining consciousness. It is but seven weeks since her husband, the late Thos. Trimble, passed away and the double bereavement renders the family heart broken. Deceased whose maiden name was Rose A. Walsh, was a devoted wife and loving mother and her sorrowing children have the sympathy of all in their sad bereavement. The children are Herbert, in Buffalo, Leo, in Montreal, and Clarence and Helen at home. Two sisters Misses Mary and Jennie Walsh, and one brother, Mr. John Walsh also survive.

ARTEMAS WILLIAM GRANGER.

It is with much regret and sorrow that we report the death of Artemas William Granger, eldest son of Philura Cushman and Artemas C. Granger, born in Camden Sept. 9th, 1843.

He passed peacefully away May 31st, 1910. Mr. Granger was a man of high intellectual power and loved to travel. In his younger days he made two journeys to California, the first by way of New York, and again by way of the Isthmus of Panama.

In 1871 he married Martha Ella

Montreal Herald Building Collapses

Hugh Water Tank Caused The Wreck.

Montreal, June 13.—One of the most terrible disasters in the history of this city took place at 10.45 this morning, when the huge water tank on the roof of The Herald building collapsed and fell through five stories to the basement, carrying twenty-six people to their death. To add to the horror fire immediately broke out, and in an incredibly short space of time the whole building was a mass of flames. Scores of men, women, boys and girls rushed to the windows and cried aloud for ladders, while the flames leaped from the adjoining windows and flared high above the roof. Their only hope of escape was by the front windows by means of ladders. The whole interior of the building, with its stairways, hoists, elevators, etc., had been carried down by the awful crash, leaving only a little fringe of the floor adjacent to the front windows.

The scene was indescribable. Brave men cried like children, and women and girls fainted as the screams and cries of the helpless victims reached their ears.

The water tank containing, it is said, about 30,000 gallons of water, or a weight of about 150 tons, was perched high above the centre of the roof at the rear of the building. Apparently the weight of the huge tank was too much for the supporting walls. At any rate the tank crashed down without a moment's warning, carrying the entire interior of the building with it. Into this vortex were swept girls and men from every floor. The entire centre wall, the whole of the rear wall and most of the two side walls were carried down into the lane at the rear, and there the debris is piled thirty and forty feet high—a hopeless mass of brick, stone, iron girders, timbers, machinery, paper and presses.

Buried under this wreckage are the victims, poor people caught and carried to death without a second's warning. Too much praise cannot be given the firemen. Seldom, if ever, have men played better the part of heroes. They braved the terrible heat and danger to rescue the girls from the upper stories and it is estimated that they carried down about one hundred with the flames bursting from every window. The firemen told some pathetic stories.

"I saw a woman in there," said one grim fighter, pointing to the top story, "but she was pinned under a beam, and I couldn't move her. It was awful to hear her scream." Another grey-haired veteran wept as he failed to save a life amid the wreckage in the rear. It was there that the flames were the hottest, and there the dead and dying were piled amidst the debris. Lieut. Cavanagh, a fire-fighter of 25 years' experience, saw a man struggling under the wreckage. The firemen threw him a life-line, but just as the victim's arm was raised to grasp the line more of the wall crashed down burying him from sight. Cavanagh and his men turned their backs and sobbed like children. When they next looked toward the spot there was no sign of life.

He passed peacefully away May 31st, 1910. Mr. Granger was a man of high intellectual power and loved to travel. In his younger days he made two journeys to California, the first by way of New York, and again by way of the Isthmus of Panama.

In 1871 he married Martha Ella Granger, who died Feb. 7th, 1880. For a number of years he made his home in Canby, Minn., but always retained the old homestead in Camden.

Mr. Granger retired and came from Canby last February to spend his remaining days in his boyhood home. In religion he was a Presbyterian. The funeral service was conducted at his late residence by Rev. Mr. Thompson of Newburgh, and the remains interred in Riverside cemetery. By his kind acts and generous dealings with his fellow men he won for himself many warm friends.

He is survived by six children Homer G. and Cecil L. of Canby; Harry A., of Mantorville; Mrs. Ole A. Erickson, of Zimmerman, all of Minnesota. Mrs. F. C. Luther and Mr. Arthur H. were with him on the homestead, near Strathcona.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to his children in their sad bereavement.

SONG SERVICE.

Despite the unfavorable weather a splendid congregation, including a considerable number of strangers, attended the decidedly successful song service, in Roblin Methodist Church, on Sunday evening, May 20th. The church was decorated with plants and flowers, and the music was under the direction of Miss Iva Horton. The service opened with a splendid anthem "O Give Thanks" (Mac Phail) by a full choir, in which all the parts were well-balanced; then followed an extremely pretty motion song by little girls, carrying flowers, tied with dainty bows of ribbon; a ladies' trio by Misses Richmond and Richardson and Mrs. Richardson; a solo by Miss Iva Horton; "Hear my Prayer" (Emerson) beautifully and softly sung by the choir, at conclusion of sermon, instead of the customary prayer, while the congregation sat with heads bowed; a mixed quartet, melody and humming; Scripture Readings and sermon were conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. Horton; the service closing with a benediction chant by the choir. All departed pointed and well pleased.

The Haag circus came very nearly not showing at Brantford. The city demanded $100 for the privilege of showing and parading the streets. The show endeavored to evade this by locating outside the city limits. The city thereupon refused permission for the parade, unless a fee of $40 were paid. The parade was held up at the limits till 12 o'clock, when the money was paid over. Then Brantford township came on the outfit for $80, for showing, which was also paid under protest.

firemen threw him a life-line, but just as the victim's arm was raised to grasp the line more of the wall crashed down burying him from sight. Cavanagh and his men turned their backs and sobbed like children. When they next looked toward the spot there was no sign of life.

There were about 375 people employed in The Herald building at the time of the disaster. The building, which was a very old one, had five stories and a basement. On the top floor, which was occupied by the bindery, about 80 girls were employed. It was from here that most of the missing disappeared. All who were at work in the rear of the building were carried down with the water tank. On the next lower floors were the newsroom, then the composing rooms, then the editorial rooms, and finally the business office on the ground floor.

The real miracle is that there were not scores burned to death. When the crash came the gas pipes were all broken, and the burners under the linotype battery and stereotype department set the blaze going on every floor, before the firemen could get their apparatus to work. Owing to the amount of paper and combustible matter the building was wreathed in flames in an incredibly short space of time. In addition to the roaring flames, the crashing timbers, the falling walls and the dust and smoke, and, above all, the cries of the wounded, made it a perfect inferno.

Montreal, June 15th—Eight more bodies were dug out to-day, making a total of eighteen, of whom sixteen so far have been identified, two remaining with nothing left by which even a guess at their identity could be had. It has now been definitely ascertained that thirty-two people were killed in the disaster, all of the missing having been either traced or found to be amongst the dead. There are therefore, fourteen bodies still buried in the wreckage, and work is being actively carried on all night in search of these.

What the Divers See

Picture to yourself a world of shadows. Green shadows, coming and going with the everlasting change of a light unseen, as behind a waving green-gauze curtain. A world beautiful beyond compare were it not for the cold, dumb silence, mysterious and fascinating; were it not also for the dread of unknown evils that might lurk behind these shadows. Such the great underworld of the sea, writes Mr. F. St. Mars, in Pearson's Weekly.

Here is no sound—that's the abiding terror of the place. The silence is appalling. It seems tense, like a drawn wire. You feel it must snap, but it never does.

Such silence would drive a human being mad. The silence of the great deserts is nothing to it, nor the stillness of the vast heights, nor the quiet on a ship in mid-ocean. For here, of all horrors, is a world full of life, teeming with creatures that can make no sound—they are dumb.

Here are all other things, colors run riot, heat, cold, life, death, strife, and love, but there is no noise, not so much as a whisper.

The anemones on the floor strike the eye first by reason of their color. Pink, salmon, and coral such as brush never painted, delicate as a dream; red, flaming, angry blood-red; purple of a horrible livid hue that no upper thing of air could assume—unless it be some strange, wind orchid; white of more than snowy virginity, and a dozen others.

These things, these squat, fleshy, plant-like tubes live. Look at their rows of tentacles, and see whether they live.

Let a shrimp come paddling along and touch one. In a flash there is a convulsion within the thing. The tentacles writhe, and clutch, and writhe again, like the arms of a dozen blind men in agony. Perhaps they miss and the shrimp goes off like a thin thread of light. Perhaps they catch and then the thing folds suddenly inwards, and is still. Only after a long time does the horror open, and eject the empty shell of what was once a shrimp.

I have seen one—it may have been six inches high or more—catch and, what is more, hold a fish of half a pound in weight.

One moment it was a motionless vegetable. Next moment it was a hungry, clutching, straining, purposeful thing—blind and objectionable. The fish was caught sideways and lashing forward. One could see the beautiful silver sides heave and ripple under the convulsive struggle. But the exquisite salmon-pink horror of an anemone kept on working the luckless scaly one back, always back.

The fish did not escape.

These vivid, weird things are the creatures are quite motionless they are invisible.

There are hundreds of plaice, flounders, and dabs alone. To say nothing of sand eels, gobies, skates and a dozen others. All motionless, watching to kill or be killed.

If they move to kill something they give away the secret of their presence, and some other something is as likely to kill them. Being sand color they vanish directly they are still.

Suddenly a fish falls slowly, writhing and lashing from above. It has escaped some enemy, only to die of its wounds.

There are no crabs? You are quite sure there are no crabs? Yes! Now the fish touches the bottom, and dies—look! In every direction as far as you can see along the sandy floor are crabs. All moving inwards from a wide radius, the centre of which circle is that dead fish.

And gradually more crabs grow up out of the murky green haze, and yet more, till the whole floor of the sea is dotted with them—all moving inwards. It would seem almost as if they had sprung up through the sand itself—since they were not "evoked" out of space.

That is just what they did do. They were there all the time—waiting—motionless; buried just beneath the sand. Only their eyes, these extraordinary eyes placed on the ends of stalks, were uncovered, watching for this.

Directly a crab sees another crab rise up literally out of the ground, and move off into the haze, it does likewise. For vision is limited in the green-fog-like sea, so each crab watches his neighbor. Thus the advent of food in any spot becomes speedily known for a great distance—almost as if the news was telegraphed along the floor of this strange underworld.

Most sea creatures are beautifully, though not necessarily brightly, colored. The lobster is both. In his war paint he is a living marvel. Blue armor he wears, of such a color as we are accustomed to associate with certain gems. He, too, is a scavenger, a cleaner of the ocean. Like the crab he is, also, an insatiable fighter.

They will quarrel over that dead fish, crab and crab, crab and lobster, or lobster and lobster. The mere proximity of one will cause a fight. They like fighting, I think, seem unhappy without it, yet if possible they would appear to be inclined to exclusiveness, solitariness. Fate, however, has made them eaters of carrion, and they must congregate. This largely, though not solely, causes the upset.

The lobster is masterful, intolerant, impossible. The spirit of the castle is born in him. He seizes a

EVERY MAN IS A SOLDIER

GERMAN THEORY THAT MIGHT IS RIGHT.

She Has Proven That Providence is on Side of the Biggest Battalions.

It is related of Bismarck that, being asked what he would do if England landed a hundred thousand troops in Germany, he replied "I would send for the police."

There has been great changes on the Continent during the last half century. The change in the military situation in Europe seems to have attracted very little notice in this country. Our people do not read the service papers. I believe that the total force on both sides at a battle at Waterloo did not exceed a hundred and fifth thousand men. Yet that defeat broke Napoleon's power and opened the road of the allies to Paris, writes a London correspondent.

EVERY GERMAN A SOLDIER.

But to-day the Germans could send a force big enough to smash both Wellington and Napoleon, and still have an army of five million good soldiers.

What has happened? The Continental nations have adopted universal military service, and should we be drawn into a European war, we should have to contend not with a "standing army" but with nations in arms. The male population of Germany, France and Austria are soldiers. The German and French armies are the German and French people. Our army, Tut. The Germans would call for the police and take them all into custody. Could we within six days muster an army of three hundred thousand troops, properly trained, properly organized, and properly officered? If we could the Germans could put against them a million men, and still have four millions of soldiers in reserve. Germany and Austria united would be absolute masters of Europe if the Germans had not a single warship on the sea.

If Germany had not a warship on the sea, and if we had a hundred Dreadnoughts, the Austrians and Germans could crush France, and we could do nothing serious to prevent them.

OUR COMMAND OF THE SEA.

Should Belgium and Holland, with or without hostilities, pass under German rule, our command of the sea would be in a very great peril. And on the day we lose command of the sea we lose our empire, most of our trade, and perhaps our independence as a state.

Now, if France could not, or would not, prevent the acquisition of Belgium and Holland by Germany, we could not prevent it. We could not defend Holland and Belgium with ships; we could not attack Germany with ships. Failing the help of France we should have to stand helplessly by and see Amsterdam and Antwerp made into naval bases and fortresses under the German flag. Now the independence of Belgium and Holland but their policy is not, and now Germany is backing her big battalions by straining every nerve to build a fleet capable of meeting the British fleet in the North Sea.

THE GERMAN THEORY.

War is a part of policy, and might is right. That is the theory. It is a theory with Germany and a theory which she has thrice put into practice. It is a theory against which benevolent speeches and amiable compliments are like straws before a gale.

So much for the policy of Clausewitz. But we have next to consider the strategy of Clausewitz. And when we understand thoroughly the German theory of policy and the German theory of war we shall understand that we are a nation of lazy and conceited people, living in a fool's paradise and accepting words as facts.

REIGN OF GEORGE I.

King Was Unable to Speak the English Language.

George I. had an excellent reason for not wishing to preside at Cabinet meetings. He could not speak English; and Walpole, the Prime Minister, could not speak German or French. When they spoke to each other they talked Latin, but both of them were so poor Latinists that it is said they found considerable difficulty in understanding each other. At all events, King George soon gave up the attempt to master the intricacies of the politics of a country which was utterly foreign to him through the medium of Walpole's Latin, and he left Cabinet meetings severely alone. The right of the Sovereign to preside over the Cabinet then lapsed, never to be revived.

Thackeray, by the way, found George I., like George III., worthy of his blessing. He wrote:—

The days are over in England of that strange religion of kingworship, when priests flattered princes in the Temple of God; when servility was held to be ennobling duty; when beauty and youth tried eagerly for royal favor; and woman's shame was held to be no dishonor. Mended morals and mended manners in courts and people are among the priceless consequences of the freedom which George I. came to rescue and secure. He kept his compact with his English subjects; and if he escaped no more than other men and monarchs from the vices of his age, at least we may thank him for preserving and transmitting the liberties of ours. In our free air, royal and humble homes have alike been purified; and truth, the birthright of high and low among us, which quite fearlessly judges our greatest personages, can only speak of them now in words of respect and regard. There are stains in the portrait of the first George, and traits in it which none of us need admire; but among the nobler features are justice, courage, moderation—and these we may recognize ere we turn the picture to the wall.

The Byronic view of the Georges has hitherto largely held the popular imagination; but, considering what his reign gave to England, George I. at least scarcely deserved Byron's flaming hate.

heave and ripple under the convulsive struggle. But the exquisite salmon-pink horror of an anemone kept on working the luckless scaly one back, always back.

The fish did not escape.
These vivid, weird things are the filters of the sea. It is their business to keep the sea clean. To purify that green world. To remove flesh in particles, in atoms of microscopic floating minuteness.
To catch, and to hold, and to retain all superfluities that that world may not become unclean, foul, and eventually dead. That is their business; for that they hold the charter of life. They, even they, are a cog in the great wheel.

So, too, are the mussels. A bivalve, differently built. Another scheme of complex life from the anemone, and related only in common purpose. Take two buckets of sea-water, one with mussels in and one without. Both will resemble green fog. Leave them for a night. In the morning you will be somewhat surprised to find the abode of the mussels quite clear; whilst the bucket without them will be still like green fog—all clouded.

But, to return to the anemones, it may not be generally known that they move, are capable of locomotion. They do not go in for racing; speed could scarcely be called their forte. They just move, and a snail is as an express train to a wheel barrow compared to them.

I have watched the process. First the stem of the anemone bends—its head drops to the ground. You think it is about to die. Then it lifts one side of the disc-like base upon which it stands, draws it in,
and lifts up the other side, which it stretches out.

The proceeding is like a snail's method of perambulation. But it is of the essence of slowness, so slow that you cannot see the motion. At least the individual I watched took twenty minutes bowing his head to the earth alone.
Then I went away. (He lived on the southeast coast, near Dover, that anemone.)

Most of this "frantic hustling" takes place at night. Why at night
I don't know. Perhaps they are ashamed of the lack of hurry. If an anemone finds himself situated in a position lacking in food, he shifts to a better. Apparently it takes starvation to shift them, but perhaps love—or what passes for such—makes them roam.

If one of these creatures finds something that moves, to which it can hang on, it is delighted. There is one kind which has a hankering after whelk shells in which hermit crabs reside. How it gets upon these is unknown.

Speaking of crabs reminds one that these are the cleaners of the ocean. It is the crabs that have the last word in every submarine dispute.

In a sense they resemble vultures. They come from "nowhere in particular," are apparently created out of space, just as vultures are or seem to be. Moreover, there appears to be no place where the crabs are not.

Take a typical scene. The still cold green of this silent world, a flat-bottom of sand, and—nothing.
Not a living, moving creature in sight, which is absurd, for the place is teeming really, but because the them eaters of carrion, and they must congregate. This largely, though not solely, causes the upset.

The lobster is masterful, intolerant, impossible. The spirit of the castle is born in him. He seizes a hole or cranny and holds it, if he can, in solitary grandeur. Yet will he follow an enemy a great distance day after day, night after night, for perhaps a week. This I have known. Nor need the enemy be a lobster. Anything will do, an octopus or two big crabs. Limbs are lost in these fights, more frequently the big pinchers or fighting weapons. These—so large that they often almost weigh down the owner
—are naturally the first to be seized —perhaps because of their weight the first to snap off.

The lobster grows, but his shell does not grow; he casts his shell.
That is a dangerous time for the lobster. The new shell is soft and useless; exposure is required to harden it. The creature itself is weak, seemingly from the effort.
Then is the crabs' chance to get their own back. The crab never misses a chance.

The lobster seeks holes in the rocks. Even here is not safety.
The conger may come, and the conger is the terror of all lobsters.

I have known a female lobster cast her shell in the open. She was exhausted, spent, and on her back, and the crabs, seeing this, began to gather, to glide sideways from the shadows, like vultures.

But the male was at hand—He appeared—backwards—shooting through the water like a released spring. He, at least, never wavered.
Perhaps he had fought hard for his mate. Could it be that he loved her? Be that as it may, the crabs retired in haste—the lobster seemed to be looking for them.

Then he gently lifted that female on to her legs—in spite of the huge claws, of the unavoidable clumsiness, the tenderness of the action was evident. Nor was that all. He knew the sea, and the cruelty of the sea; especially he knew the crabs. So he carried her to a hole among the rocks, and mounted guard outside, all such time as the hardening of her shell relieved his anxiety.

A knight in the days of chivalry and chain-armor could have done no more. Many since then have done far less.

FAMOUS POLICE DOG.

"Four-footed Sherlock Homes" Brings Thieves to Bay.

Tref, the famous St. Petersburg police dog, was taken to Voronezh from Moscow and successfully tracked down the murderer of one of the employes on the property of Prince Vasilchikoff, in the borough of Pavlovsky. On the train by which Tref travelled a passenger was robbed of a pocket-book containing about $250. The services of the "four-footed Sherlock Homes," as he is called in the papers, were at once brought into requisition, and, after smelling all the passengers, Tref went for one of them as he left the train at the next station and was entering a cab. The stolen property was found in his possession. Hardly a week passes but that some fresh exploit of Tref is recorded.

track Germany with ships. Failing the help of France we should have to stand helplessly by and see Amsterdam and Antwerp made into naval bases and fortresses under the German flag. Now the independence of Belgium and Holland concerns us much more nearly than it concerns France. Can we expect France to take the cost and risk of a desperate war to defend these states while we are unable to render them any efficient assistance? The population of Germany exceeds the population of France.
In the same proportion the German army exceeds the army of France. If we had an army of four million the case would be very different. But we have not half a million men, and very few of those we have could be sent into the field in time to count in the struggle.
As a military nation we are simply nowhere.

VICTORY IN NUMBERS.

In warfare Providence is on the side of the big battalions. Nearly all the strategists in the world are agreed that the odds of two to one are sufficient to ensure the victory to the strongest side. If we were engaged in a war with any great European Power we should be faced on land with odds of ten to one. Against such odds no human power could save us from defeat.

But there is another element besides the element of numbers—that is, readiness. It is not enough to have the soldiers; they must be ready for action. This is well understood in Germany and in France, but in England it does not seem to be understood. It is not the nation with the largest number of troops that may count upon victory. It is the nation which can place the largest number of troops in the place where they are needed, and at the time when they are needed.

ARMY UNREADY.

In the Franco-German war the Germans were able to mobilize and concentrate their troops more readily than the French. In the early battles the French were outnumbered by three to one, five to one, ten to one. The consequence was the flower of the French army was defeated or captured in a very short time, and the French were never able to make up the lost ground. We have the smallest army of all the great European powers; and the unreadiest. The British public do not read military journals nor military books. If they did we should have compulsory and universal military services in this country in a very short time.

Let us decide for ourselves quickly whether we shall take our ideas of German policy from Bismarck and Clausewitz, or from Winston Churchill and Mr. Byles and his publication.

And to assist us in our decision let us remember that as soon as Bismarck, the disciple of Clause-witz, had got his big battalions, he made war upon Denmark and annexed Schleswig and Holstein; made war upon Austria and defeated her in a few weeks; made war upon France, aided by Von Moltke, the pupil of Clausewitz, and an-nexed Alsace and Lorraine. Bismarck and Clausewitz are dead;

The Byronic view of the Georges has hitherto largely held the popular imagination; but, considering what his reign gave to England, George I. at least scarcely deserved Byron's flaming hate.

DRINKS AND DYSPEPSIA.

Take Soda Water and Ice Cream Separate.

The thirsty season is here. With hot weather most of us take more liquid, take it in copious quantities then wonder why indigestion follows.

There is less harm done by over-drinking in summer than by drinking the wrong things.

Water is healthful, provided it is germ free, and it is hard to drink too much of it at the proper temperature. This is not iced. Nothing more quickly induces dyspepsia than pouring ice water into the stomach. If water is bottled and kept in a refrigerator it is better and quenches thirst more quickly than if iced.

Hot water is a better thirst quencher than cold. Nor is it as heating as people imagine. It is especially valuable if one is overheated, as it averts the risk of inflammation in the stomach.

Ice cream sodas are breeders of dyspepsia. A well-known stomach specialist advises to take ice cream and your soda water separately. It is the mixture that is harmful. Unless any soft drink is to work trouble, let moderation be your rule.
Do not get the soda water habit.
It will save money and digestion.

Abuse of tea and coffee is a frequent cause of dyspepsia. Tea taken with meals is apt to so dilute the gastric juices that power to digest solid food is impaired. The tannin which tea contains acts injurious on the digestive process.
The effects are especially bad when tea has been boiled, is very strong, or when it is creamed. Iced tea, the favorite summer luncheon beverage, acts unfavorably on the kidneys.

Coffee is less injurious than tea, contrary to general opinion. When taken too strong or in too great quantities it has an irritating effect on the mucous lining of the stomach. Wholesale condemnation of it is folly, but moderation is the rule.

BRUTALITY IN GERMAN ARMY.

Non-Commissioned Officer Guilty of 260 Acts of Cruelty.

A court-martial sitting at Glogau, in Prussian Silesia, has sentenced a non-commissioned officer, Franz Libowska, to two years' imprisonment and degradation for perpetrating 260 acts of cruelty on members of the Fifth Battalion of Sappers.

The evidence showed that Libowska hit a recruit's head fifty times in succession and then struck his victim in the face with the flat of

QUEEN MARY OF ENGLAND

IDEAL WIFE AND MOTHER, AND KIND OF HEART.

Remarkable Knowledge of the Dominions Over Which King George V. Will Rule.

Queen Mary once described herself as a child as being "very naughty, very happy and very uninteresting." We can believe that she was a sufficiently healthy and natural child to be naughty at times, we are quite sure that she was very happy, but we can hardly endorse the statement that she was uninteresting, says the London Express. Her mother, the Duchess of Teck, wrote of the princess when a baby, "She really is as sweet and engaging a child as you can wish to see; full of life and fun and playful as a kitten; with the deepest blue eyes imaginable, quantities of fair hair, a tiny rosebud of a mouth, a lovely complexion (pink and white) and a most perfect figure! In a word a model of a baby!"

Queen Mary was the first child of the marriage of the popular Princess Mary of Cambridge with the Duke of Teck, and was born at Kensington Palace May 27, 1867, in the room which had once been the nursery of Queen Victoria. It seemed, indeed, of happy augury that she should have had the same birthplace, the same month and the same name as Queen Victoria, who was, also, one of her godmothers.

PRINCESS AND SICK LAD.

Though christened Victoria Mary, the Princess was from her infancy called May, and as Princess May she first won the hearts of the people. Her mother was full of sympathy and abounding good-nature, a royal woman, in the highest sense of the term. She was particularly kind to the poor, and the young Princess grew up to have the greatest sympathy with the struggling and unfortunate. Many are the stories told of her kindness of heart when a young girl to the people about White Lodge, Richmond Park. A poor lad dying of consumption in one of the cottages found Princess May a daily visitor. She gave time and trouble to her self-imposed task, and frequently sat by the bed of the sick lad and talked to him. On the Sunday morning on which he died she stopped and kissed him and mingled her tears with those of the family round the bed.

A SOCIAL REFORMER.

All measures of social reform appeal to Queen Mary which have for their object the bettering of the conditions of the lives of the people. The destruction of rookeries and the substitution of cheerful and wholesome dwellings; the providing of playgrounds for the children in congested areas, and other such schemes find in her a hearty sympathizer. She has a clear and thoughtful mind and an intellectual grasp of the primary necessity of giving the people good environment.

DEVOTED TO THE HOME.

THE GRAND OLD ADMIRAL

DEATH IN ENGLAND OF SIR WILLIAM LUARD.

He Had a Most Stirring and Adventurous Career in the British Navy.

The death took place in England a fortnight ago of Sir William Luard, "The Grand Old Admiral." Sir William had a most stirring and adventurous career. He entered the Naval College at Portsmouth in 1836, at the age of 13, and two years later was appointed to the South American station.

While at Valparaiso, having exchanged to the Samarang, Mr. Luard walked the 36 miles to Casa Blanca, covering them without a stop in six hours. Then he walked back, and, after a short rest, covered the last eight miles in an hour and twenty minutes. At the same station he had a marvellous escape from death while engaged in a dare-devil feat of cliff-climbing. In 1846 he was promoted to the rank of mate, and the Samarang was ordered to China to take part in the operations there. On the way the ship was and young Luard behaved with such gallantry as to win warm approval from his captain.

In the following year he was present at the storming of the forts of Tycocktow, and, for bravery, was promoted to be lieutenant. In 1845, while serving on the Isis at the Isle of France, Lieut. Luard jumped overboard in full uniform after a sailor who had fallen from aloft. The crew of the Isis drew up a testimonial, and, although the regulations of the service forbid officers receiving manifestations of regard or presents from the men, the document was forwarded by Sir John Marshall to the lieutenant's father at Witham Lodge, where it is still preserved.

In 1855 he was serving as Commander of the Indefatigable, and made another effort to save the life of a sailor who had fallen overboard. He jumped into the sea, despite the fact that sharks were seen in the vicinity of the ship.

Later on Luard was decorated with the Order of the Southern Cross by the Emperor of Brazil, and he subsequently was in charge of a party that attacked twenty-three piratical junks at Chiu-a-poo. Of the 1,800 men who manned the pirates' vessels, and the remainder dispersed.

In 1853 Luard applied to be sent to the Crimea, but was refused, and he was given command of the Star, bound for the South American station. The crew of this ship were in an unsatisfactory state of discipline, and very unwilling to sail. After a "harassing fortnight" at Sheerness, the ship was taken out to sea by the officers in the early morning, before the crew were on deck. Once at sea, their captain had very little trouble with the men, and the Star was favorably reported on when she reached Rio.

FOR THE CURE OF CANCER

EXPERIMENTS IN THE TREATMENT OF THE DISEASE.

Attempts to Destroy Cancer Cells by Injections of Non-toxic Residue.

Some interesting notes on cancer research are given in a recent number of The New York Times. Last year Dr. Eugene Hodenpyl, pathologist to the Roosevelt Hospital, found that an abdominal fluid which developed in the case of a patient suffering with cancer of the liver when injected into other cancerous patients caused the growths either to disappear or resulted in improvement in the condition of the patients. He did not claim that he had discovered a cure for this disease, but simply stated the fact. Dr. Hodenpyl has since died.

At the time of Dr. Hodenpyl's death forty-seven patients had been treated along the lines indicated by his discovery. Some of them apparently had been cured; the remainder, it has been reported, show marked improvement. In view of these facts it is now interesting to note that analogous treatment on the part of other physicians is producing favorable and

ENCOURAGING RESULTS.

Since then Dr. J. W. Vaughn has written an article on the subject, which is summarized in The New York Medical Journal.

Vaughn says that the recent works concerning the chemistry of the bacterial cell tend to prove that in bacterial infections, especially of the lytic type, a ferment is formed which is capable of destroying the bacterial cell through the injection of the specific "residue" of that bacterial cell within the human body.

With this in mind, he has attempted likewise to induce the formation of a ferment within the human body which is capable of destroying the cancer cell through the injections of its non-toxic residue into the body from which the cancer was obtained. Examples of the formation of such a substance within the host through normal circumstances might explain the few cases of apparent self-cure of cancer which have been observed, some of which cannot be denied. The method Vaughn used is the following:

THE CANCER MATERIAL.

is dissected as freely as possible from all surrounding tissues, after which it is ground up. The material is next washed with water, dilute salt solution, alcohol, and, lastly, ether. This process removes salts, fats, wax, several proteid bodies, and traces of carbohydrates. The remaining substance is then heated in a flask with a reflux condenser with from fifteen to twenty times its weight of a 2 per cent. solution of sodium hydroxide in absolute alcohol, and by this means it is split into a toxic and a non-toxic group.

The toxic portion is soluble in the alcohol, the non-toxic is insoluble, and it is with this portion we have to deal.

perpetrating 200 acts of cruelty on members of the Fifth Battalion of Sappers.

The evidence showed that Libowska hit a recruit's head fifty times in succession and then struck his victim in the face with the flat of his sword. Libowska also maltreated the same recruit by kicking his head with heavy knee boots.

Another recruit received thirty blows in succession on the head and face, and Libowska dug his nails so deeply into the unhappy soldier's cheek that blood was drawn. Many recruits and young soldiers had to submit to having their hair pulled out of their heads.

One of Libowska's habits was to throw bags of cartridges, swords and other similar missiles at the men's heads while they were cleaning the barracks. He once compelled his men when drilling to hit one another on the head, while he looked on and enjoyed the combat. After a hard day's drill he would compel the men to get up at night and sing to him. Those whose voices or songs displeased him were beaten and systematically ill-treated on the following days.

In many cases Libowska forced his men to lend him money, which he never repaid.

CHILD DIES A MARTYR.

Starved to Death Rather Than Touch Money he Collected.

A touching story of a child's heroism comes from Wittingenreuth, Bavaria, where Francis Elsburg, aged ten years, died after being found unconscious in the street. Medical examination showed that the cause of death was starvation.

Francis was the eldest child of very poor parents. The mother recently gave birth to her seventh child. The father has been unemployed during the whole winter.

Little Francis resolved to do his best, and left home without permission. He started to beg for alms, and tramped from village to village in the neighborhood. He received many gifts of money and provisions. Nevertheless, with more than 85 in his pockets—a veritable fortune under the circumstances—as well as bread and other eatables, Francis died from starvation because, with wonderful heroism, he refused to eat a morsel himself so that he might bring every farthing and every crumb home to his parents, brothers, and sisters.

After giving his address and receiving the assurance that his parents would receive the results of his begging tour without delay, little Francis died from exhaustion a few hours after he was admitted to the local infirmary.

ARISTOCRATIC BEGGARS.

Owing to the Russo-Japanese war, many rich Japanese families were ruined, and some nobles were actually driven to beg for a living. Being ashamed of his trade, they wander from place to place with their faces carefully hidden by a curiously-shaped mask; and to avoid the shame of receiving alms by hand, they hold out a Japanese fan, on which any gifts of money are placed.

sympatizer. She has a clear and thoughtful mind and an intellectual grasp of the primary necessity of giving the people good environment.

DEVOTED TO THE HOME.

Queen Mary is a wife and mother in whom her husband and sons find a high ideal of womanhood, and her only daughter a bright example. She and the Prince superintend the education of their children, and have them instructed on thoroughly modern lines. Up to five years of age they are taught in kindergarten methods and their powers of observation are cultivated and their minds allowed free play.

The Princess's own gouvernante and companion, Madame Bricha, had charge of the elder children when they were tiny, and the tutors to the young princes are Mr. Hua and Mr. Hansell, under whose charge they have been taken to see many of the historic and show places of London. They have paid their first visits to the Tower of London and to the Zoological Gardens with the fresh natural enthusiasm of a country cousin. They are dressed plainly, live plainly, and have good serviceable toys which are not easily destroyed.

No pleasanter picture of an English mother amongst her bairns could be seen than that afforded by the Princess of Wales when living quietly at York Cottage. All the children, even to the youngest, come to their mother's room for tea, and when there was a baby it was brought down and laid on the couch so that the circle might be complete.

WIDELY TRAVELED.

It was no easy task to follow so popular a Princess of Wales as Queen Alexandra. She had, indeed, almost created the position, for never before had the wife of the heir to the throne discharged so much of the State and social duties belonging to the Sovereign. If Queen Mary as Princess of Wales has taken less public prominence at home, she has performed the very important work of visiting the Britains beyond the seas, a unique record for a princess of the Royal house. She has an unrivalled knowledge of the dominions over which her husband is now called upon to rule.

GOOD PLACE TO BUILD.

Our house should be on the hill tops of cheerfulness and serenity, so high that no shadows rest on them, and where the morning comes so early, and the evening tarries so late, that the day has twice as many golden hours as those of other people. He is to be pitied whose house is in some valley of grief between the hills, with the longest night and the shortest day.

ELECTROCUTE RATS.

One of the latest ideas for killing rats is a trap into which the animal walks, attracted by an electric light and a display of food. Once in he cannot get out, and an electric current kills him in fifty or sixty seconds.

KISS SAVED BOY.

Memory of Mother's Tenderness Prevented Flight.

Some years ago a Glasgow lad, an only son, fell into evil ways. Late hours, foolish companionships were succeeded by gambling and theft from his employer's till to pay his debts. The unhappy youth suddenly awoke to the fact that he must flee or suffer the consequences of a near disclosure of his conduct. Flight seemed the only possible alternative. Wretched and watchful he lay in bed on what he intended to be the last night in his boyhood home. A gentle tap warned him of his widowed mother's approach, and full of shame he feigned sleep, as, with shaded light, she bent over and kissed him, whilst the soft whisper, "God keep my laddie now and always," fell like a gentle reproach on the culprit's ears.

Next morning a tale full of sad confession was tremblingly poured out amidst dusty ledgers and folios. "When mother kissed me I couldn't run away, and oh, will you forgive me for her sake, sir?" The employer, a kindly man with boys of his own, listened—and forgave. The youth had one more chance and he used it well.

To-day he is the trusted, busy servant in the same firm, yet not too busy to pay a visit sometimes to the churchyard grave, where inscribed on a simple stone are the words: "Sacred to the memory of a boy's best friend—my mother."

INGENIOUS SAFE.

Bide Defiance to Burglars and Keeps Radium In.

What is claimed to be the most ingenious safe ever constructed has just been completed for the British Radium Corporation. The problem presented to the makers was not only to construct a safe that would bid defiance to burglars, but which would at the same time prevent the escape of the radium.

It is well known to science that radium emanations will pass through the thickest and hardest steel. For this reason the inner coffer of the safe was made of lead three inches thick, enclosed within a burglar-proof steel shell. There are many other special features, including a means of collecting the radium emanations before the coffer is opened.

This compartment of the safe is designed to hold one hundred pounds of radium, valued at $5,000,000,000. The total weight of the safe is one and a half tons.

Vaughn reports eight cases treated with this serum. Immediately after the first injection of cancer residue the symptom of pain ceases. While the growth of new tissue in all patients treated has not been entirely stopped, yet it may safely be stated that its rapidity has been lessened.

THACKERAY AND GEORGE II.

Courage the Only Virtue the Author Allowed the King.

One of the most entertaining things in Thackeray's "Four Georges" is his description of the circumstances in which it was announced to George II. that he was now King of England. Thackeray tells us how one June afternoon in 1727 a "broad-faced, jolly-looking, and very corpulent cavalier" rode up to Richmond House, and asked to see the owner of the mansion.

The mistress of the house and her ladies, to whom our friend was admitted, said he could not be introduced to the master, however, pressing the business might be. The master was asleep after his dinner; he always slept after his dinner; and we be to the person who interrupted him. Nevertheless, our stout friend of the jackboots put the affrightened ladies aside, opened the forbidden door of the bedroom, wherein upon the bed lay a little gentleman; and here the eager messenger knelt down in his jackboots.

He on the bed started up, and with many oaths and a strong German accent asked who was there, and who dared to disturb him!

"I am Sir Robert Walpole," said the messenger. The awakened sleeper hated Sir Robert Walpole. "I have the honor to announce to your Majesty that your Royal father, King George I., died at Osnaburg, on Saturday last, the 10th instant."

"Dat is one big lie!" roared out His Sacred Majesty King George II.; but Sir Robert Walpole stated the fact, and from that day until three-and-thirty years after, George, the second of the name, ruled over England.

Courage, by the way, is about the only virtue which Thackeray allows the second of the Georges.

DON'T KNOW KING IS DEAD.

In these days of cables and wireless telegraphy it is almost impossible to believe that there are portions of the British Empire where the news of the lamentable death of King Edward is not known. But in such far-away places as the Pitcairn Islands and Tristan d'Acunha, British Islands, the news may not reach the inhabitants for perhaps a year or two, unless some trading vessel drifts in that direction, and by that means acquaints the people. There is one spot not so far removed from the British Islands where there is a large community unacquainted with the great event which is stirring the world. That is St. Kilda, off the Hebrides.

Canadian Made

No doubt you will agree that if quality and price are equal every Canadian should buy Canadian made goods in preference to any others.

Not only is it patriotic—it's sound common sense. The money spent for Canadian goods goes to build up Canadian industries and prosperity, and makes it easier for every Canadian to earn a good living.

On the other hand, money spent for foreign made goods goes out of the country to pay foreigners—not to benefit Canadians.

NA-DRU-CO

Toilet and Medicinal Preparations are compounded in Canada from the purest ingredients which money can buy. The National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada returns to Canadians in employees' salaries, dividends and other expense disbursements, close to One Million Dollars a year. In addition to this we spend millions every year in Canada for raw materials, tins, bottles, labels, boxes and other supplies, giving employment to hundreds of Canadian tinsmiths, glass workers, paper makers, printers, lithographers, box makers, and others.

So even if NA-DRU-CO goods were only "just as good" as those imported from other countries, you would be following a sensible and patriotic course in buying them.

As a matter of fact, though, NA-DRU-CO Toilet and Medicinal Preparations are better than those imported. Try NA-DRU-CO Talcum Powder, NA-DRU-CO Greaseless Toilet Cream, NA-DRU-CO Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound or any other NA-DRU-CO preparation, and see for yourself.

You risk nothing in making the test, for if the NA-DRU-CO article does not entirely satisfy you, return it and your druggist will refund your money.

MONTREAL FIRE HORROR

28 Dead and Missing in a Tragedy at the Herald Newspaper Building.

Montreal, June 13.—One of the most terrible disasters in the history of this city took place at 10.45 o'clock this morning, when the huge water tank on the roof of The Herald building collapsed and fell through five stories to the basement, carrying twenty-six people to their death. To add to the horror fire immediately broke out, and in an incredibly short space of time the whole building was a mass of flames. Scores of men, women, boys and girls rushed to the windows and cried aloud for ladders, while the flames leaped from the adjoining windows and flared high above the roof. Their only hope of escape was by the front windows by means of ladders. The whole interior of the building, with its stairways, hoists, elevators, etc., had been carried down by the awful crash, leaving only a little fringe of the floor adjacent to the front windows.

The scene was indescribable. Brave men cried like children, and women and girls fainted as the men from every floor. Just how many are lying under the debris is not definitely known. The entire centre wall, the whole of the rear wall and most of the two side walls were carried down into the lane at the rear, and there the debris is piled thirty and forty feet high—a hopeless mass of brick, stone, iron girders, timbers, machinery, paper and presses.

Buried under this wreckage are the victims, poor people caught and carried to death without a second's warning. Too much praise cannot be given the firemen: Seldom, if ever, have men played better the part of heroes. They braved the terrible heat and danger to rescue the girls from the upper stories, and it is estimated that they carried down about one hundred with the flames bursting from every window.

The real miracle is that there were not scores burned to death. When the crash came the gas pipes were all broken, and the burners

CRIPPLED BY RHEUMATISM

Suffered Tortures Until "Fruit-a-tives" Took Away The Pain.

"Fruit-a-tives," the famous fruit medicine, is the greatest and most scientific remedy ever discovered for Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives," by its marvellous action on the bowels, kidneys and skin, prevents the accumulation of Uric Acid, which causes Rheumatism and thereby keeps the blood pure and rich.

Mrs. Walter Hooper, of Hillview, Ont., says: "I suffered from severe Rheumatism, lost the use of my right arm and could not do my work. Nothing helped me until I took 'Fruit-a-tives' and this medicine cured me."

If you are subject to Rheumatism, don't wait until a severe attack comes on before trying "Fruit-a-tives." Take these fruit tablets now and thus prevent the attacks.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE KING'S HOUSEHOLD.

Many of King Edward's Officers Retained.

A despatch from London says: A complete list of the appointments to King George's household, gazetted on Friday, shows that his Majesty has retained a very large number of the members of King Edward's household. Lieut.-Col. Sir Wm. H. P. Carrington, who was controller of the Prince of Wales' household, however, replaces General Sir Dighton Probyn as keeper of the privy purse. Lord Knollys is retained as joint Private Secretary with Lieut.-Col. Sir Arthur John Bigge, the King's own Secretary; Lord Annaly, who was Lord of the Bedchamber, and many other personages who served with King George when he was Prince of Wales, have been added to the new Royal household.

FUNERAL OF GOLDWIN SMITH

Representatives of All Ranks Attend Obsequies.

A despatch from Toronto says: While the rain, wind-driven, swirled and dashed with increasing violence against those who stood around the grave to pay a last tribute to the dead, the body of Goldwin Smith, scholar, philosopher and citizen, was lowered to its final resting place in St. James' Cemetery on Saturday afternoon. The crowd of men from all ranks of society—from the representative of the Governor-General to the sturdy mechanic—who had come to the graveside, turned away from the spot, and only a few, mostly old friends of the dead scholar, lingered to watch while the grating was placed over the open grave and the flowers strewn over the grating and the pile of upthrown earth.

FIELD CROP REPORT.

Area of Wheat in Canada 1,554,400 Acres More Than Last Year.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The field crop report for May, issued by the government department, shows the area of wheat in had been carried down by the awful crash, leaving only a little fringe of the floor adjacent to the front windows.

The scene was indescribable. Brave men cried like children, and women and girls fainted as the screams and cries of the helpless victims reached their ears.

The water tank, containing, it is said, about 30,000 gallons, or a weight of about 150 tons, was perched high above the centre of the roof at the rear of the building. Apparently the weight of the tank was too much for the supporting walls. At any rate, the tank crashed down without a second's warning, carrying the entire interior of the building with it. Instead of being carried down about one hundred with the flames bursting from every window.

The real miracle is that there were not scores burned to death. When the crash came the gas pipes were all broken, and the burners under the linotype battery and stereotypy department set the blaze going on every floor before the firemen could get their apparatus to work. Owing to the amount of paper and combustible matter the building was wreathed in flames in an incredibly short space of time. In addition to the roaring flames, the crashing timbers, the falling walls and the dust and smoke, and, above all, the cries of the wounded, made it a perfect inferno.

BIG FIRE IN SEATTLE.

Buildings in Six City Blocks Were Destroyed.

A despatch from Seattle, Wash., says: A fire that broke out on the northern waterfront during a hurricane late on Friday night was carried by the wind to a district to the eastward thickly covered with wooden buildings, and in a short time twenty acres were ablaze, causing a loss of $1,000,000 and leaving 500 people homeless. The fire, starting at Railroad avenue and Battery street, destroyed all the buildings in six city blocks, and picked out a wooden house here and there in the surrounding district not entirely fire-swept. When the flames were at their height burning brands set fire to houses several blocks from the main fire. The largest buildings burned were the Galbraith-Bacon warehouses, which covered an entire block. They were erected last year at a cost of $200,000. Another large building destroyed was that of the Puget Sound Sheet Metal Works.

ENGINE STRIKES A ROCK

Three Trainmen Killed Near Port Coldwell on the C. P. R.

A despatch from Fort William says: Two trainmen were drowned and one instantly killed when the eastbound Canadian Pacific freight train left the tracks early on Friday morning near Port Coldwell, about 175 miles east of here. The dead are: Frank Wheatley, engineer; J. McMillan, brakeman; E. Clark, fireman, all of Scriven, Ont. The engine, which struck a rock, rolled down a forty-foot embankment into Lake Superior and is still lying there, with the corpses of Wheatley and Clark, in seventy-five feet of water. McMillan, who was under the rails with a broken neck, is thought to have jumped.

Rails and telegraph poles were torn up for a considerable distance. Only a few of the freight cars left the tracks. None of the men were married.

The train carried with it many feet of permanent way, thus interrupting direct communication. A wrecking train was hurried from Schreiber. The track at this point runs along the north shore within a few feet of Lake Superior, the rock slipping down abruptly into the water.

GREAT SHIPBUILDING YARD

Vickers' Sons and Maxim, of England, Come to Montreal.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Plans have been filed at Ottawa by Vickers' Sons & Maxim of England for a two and a half million dollar shipbuilding and ship repair plant to be located at Montreal. The plans include a floating dry dock, three large berths for the repairing and building of steel vessels, machine shops and a plant capable of doing the heaviest construction and repair work and covering some fifty acres of ground. Application has been made to the Government for a dock subsidy, and this will undoubtedly be granted at the rate of three and a half per cent. for twenty-five years on two and a half millions. The working and final plans of the project are being brought out by Mr. Vickers, who will shortly reach New York in the Mauretania.

An examination of the preliminary plans on file at Ottawa indicates the intention of the firm to make a serious bid for the construction of the destroyers which Canada will soon give contracts for. This craft has been a specialty of the firm.

EASILY CORRECTED.

By Clever Prescription Which Can Be Filled at Any Drug Store.

No Need to be Thin Now as Reports Show This Method Effective.

People who are very thin and scrawny ought not to be so. Undoubtedly they are more subject to disease and contagions than the normally fleshy. Thinness is usually accompanied by weakness, and weakness subjects any one to colds, coughs, consumption, pneumonia, etc. It has been discovered, almost by accident, that tincture cadomene, when combined in a prescription with proper accelerative medicines, becomes one of the most valuable, effective and reliable nutritive or flesh making medicines known to science. It is especially beneficial to men and women between the ages of sixteen and fifty-five, who from lack of proper nerve force and digestion, remain undeveloped in body, limbs, arms and bust. A well rounded symmetrical figure in man or woman indicate health, magnetism, stamina and happiness.

The reader who wishes to add from ten to forty pounds should not fail to begin with this valuable prescription:

First, obtain of any well stocked druggist, three ounces of essence of peppin and three ounces of syrup of rhubarb in an 8 oz. bottle. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol. Shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom). Shake well and take one teaspoonful before each meal, one after each meal. Drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Keep up this treatment regularly and of a certainty from one to three pounds will be added to the weight each week, and the general health will also improve.

NEXT GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

The Duke of Connaught Will Succeed Earl Grey.

A despatch from London says: The Canadian Associated Press has every reason to believe that it is intended that the Duke of Connaught shall be Governor-General of Canada, in accordance with King Edward's expressed wish. It is unlikely, however, that the official announcement will be made at present, for the Duke of Connaught is to open the South African Parliament at the end of the year, and it is improbable that he will go to Canada in midwinter. It is, therefore, proposed that Earl Grey remain in office till the spring of 1911.

He had climbed up the mountain, which since the earthquake has shown signs of greater activity, and approached too near a fissure, which was emitting sulphuric gas. He was overcome by the fumes and died almost instantly.

FIELD CROP REPORT.

Area of Wheat in Canada 1,554,400 Acres More Than Last Year.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The field crop report for May, issued by the government department, gives the area of wheat in Canada at 9,295,000 acres, which is 1,554,000 acres greater than last year. The conditions are good. Ontario shows an increase in fall wheat of from 581,000 to 609,200 acres. The effects of late frosts have been felt in many places, and injury has been done to fruits and tender vegetables in some localities, but generally the prevailing low temperatures of April and May have strengthened the field crops and have left them better able to withstand the attacks of night frosts, and re-seeding and re-planting have been less necessary than in former years.

SUICIDED TOGETHER.

Father and Adopted Daughter Jump into the St. Lawrence.

A despatch from Montreal says: Albert Esnough, a small contractor of St. Lambert, 45 years old, and his adopted daughter, Enid, aged 20, committed suicide on Sunday by jumping from the Victoria Bridge. The man floated for some minutes before disappearing, but the little girl was apparently killed by the fall. The case is a mysterious one. No one knows anything about the sad affair, except the bridge electrician, who saw the father and daughter in an animated conversation on the bridge, after which, and before the officer could interfere, Esnough climbed to the top of the bridge railing and leaped into the river, the young woman following closely. Esnough had a wife and three other children.

Temperatures of Over Ninety Degrees Reported.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The whole west is covered by a great heat wave, and crops are responding with phenomenal growth. At Winnipeg the thermometer was above eighty in the shade both on Saturday and Sunday. Several places in Saskatchewan report over 90, Watrous, on the G. T. P., with 93, being the highest heard from. The only adverse report is from Carnegie district, fourteen miles northwest of Brandon, where a terrific rain was followed by hail that lay two inches deep on the fields. Garden stuff was cut off at the ground and grain also damaged. The storm area was small.

A despatch from Berlin says: Reports received on Friday say that more than forty-five persons have been killed by the terrific electrical storms which have swept Germany and Russia. The War Department ordered that all manoeuvres be abandoned until the storms have passed. This is the result of the killing of several soldiers at various points by lightning. The damage to crops is much heavier than was first reported, and more than $1,000,000, the Rhine country being one of the chief sufferers. Several houses have been hit by bolts.

BLOWN TO PIECES IN MINE

Two Men Were Killed in Cobalt While Loading Holes.

A despatch from Cobalt says: While loading some holes at the Hargraves mine two Cornishmen named John Walsh, married and with two children, and John Parkins, a young man, were instantly killed by an explosion of dynamite. The cause of the accident is unknown. None of the holes had been loaded and the box of dynamite the men had with them had exploded.

The two went down to work in the north drift at the 275-foot level. On Wednesday afternoon and almost immediately called for ten more sticks of dynamite. A little later a young Englishman at the end of the drift heard a concussion, and, running into the drift, found Parkins with his head blown off and body shattered to the waist. He had evidently been bending over the seat of explosion. Walsh also dead, but not so badly mutilated. Parkins had only been two weeks in the camp from Michigan. Both were experienced miners.

On Wednesday also an inquest was held on the body of C. Ontie, a French-Canadian, who died Wednesday morning from injuries received in the Kerry mine on Tuesday. He was drilling into the roof of the drift when a large mass of rock became detached and fell on him. He suffered a fracture of the base of the skull and concussion of the brain.

MOTOR CARRIAGES

AWARDED DEWAR TROPHY.

The Dewar Challenge Trophy is awarded yearly by the ROYAL AUTOMOBILE CLUB for the most meritorious performance of the year under the general regulations for certified trials.

The New Daimler engine has now been in the hands of the public for nearly 18 months, quite long enough to prove its merit; owners are sending in testimonials by every post and we should like to forward to any person or persons interested a complete set of literature fully explaining this marvelous new motor. Send also for our new illustrated booklet, "The Dewar Trophy and how it was won," a history of the Greatest Engine Test on Record.

HIGHER VALUES

Consider the higher real estate value of well painted buildings, compared with unpainted ones.

Don't postpone painting—every day does its damage and piles up costs for repairs.

Martin-Senour

Paint

is the cheapest. Absolutely pure and unadulterated, it wears best, looks better and goes further, gallon for gallon, than any other paint at any price.

If undecided which paint to use, write us today for the name of our dealer nearest you—ask him about the written guarantee that backs every claim we make for our paint—a guarantee that actually protects you.

Don't experiment when certainty costs but a few cents more. There's a Martin-Senour Paint for every purpose—for house, barn, windmill, pumps, waggon, carriage, cultivator and plow—paint for wood and paint for iron—the best that skill and money can produce.

If your dealer cannot supply you, notify us and we will gladly direct you to where our paints are to be had.

CROPS IN THE WEST.

Very Little Damage was Done by the Frost.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The latest Canadian Northern crop report indicates that at all points on the line crops have had a plentiful supply of moisture. Very little damage was done by the frost. Along the main line and on the various branch lines conditions vary with localities. Humboldt, in Saskatchewan, reports very little growth on account of cold weather, while at Fort Saskatchewan, Alberta, the wheat is said to be ten inches high. At Roland, Man., some fields had to be resown. Crops need warm weather, and the last few days have been favorable. Rapid growth is expected now for some days, as the ground is generally well moistened. Hot weather is general throughout the west, and seems set fair, but the nights are still cold.

HOTELMAN'S OFFER.

Wants Assistance to Build Hotel Without a Bar at Saskatoon.

A despatch from Brandon, Manitoba, says: At the Laymen's Session of the Methodist Conference here on Thursday in a discussion on local option it was announced that E. J. Beaubier, a hotelkeeper of Saskatoon, formerly of Brandon, made a unique proposition to the temperance people of Saskatoon, agreeing that if the citizens will invest $50,000, he will put up $100,000 to build a $150,000 hotel, to be run without a bar, thus solving the problem of good accommodation without liquor.

A Storekeeper Says:

"A lady came into my store lately and said:

"I have been using a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove all winter in my apartment. I want one now for my summer home. I think these oil stoves are wonderful. If only women knew what a comfort they are, they would all have one. I spoke about my stove to a lot of my friends, and they were astonished. They thought that there was smell and smoke from an oil stove, and that it heated a room just like any other stove. I told them of my experience, and one after another they got one, and now, not one of them would give hers up for five times its cost."

The lady who said this had thought an oil stove was all right for quickly heating milk for a baby, or boiling a kettle of water, or to make coffee quickly in the morning, but she never dreamed of using it for difficult or heavy cooking. Now—she knows.

Do you really appreciate what a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove means to you? No more coal to carry, no more coming to the dinner table so tired out that you can't eat. Just light a Perfection Stove and immediately the heat from an intense blue flame shoots up to the bottom of pot, kettle or oven. But the room isn't heated. There is no smoke, no smell, no outside heat, no drudgery in the kitchen where one of these stoves is used.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

New Perfection WICK-BLUE-FLAME Oil Cook-stove

It has a Cabinet Top with a shelf for keeping plates and food hot. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

FAIRBANKS-MORSE GASOLINE ENGINES

Portable Horizontal "Screen Tank" Outfit

The cut illustrates another Fairbanks-Morse outfit developed for the farm trade, especially suited for Threshing, Sawing Wood and General Farm Power.

The cooling device consists of a fine screen placed over the storage tank slanting toward each side as shown. The hot water from the engine trickles slowly down the screens, and in this way is exposed to the cooling effect of the air. This arrangement provides a highly efficient outfit, that for steady, economical running cannot be beaten.

Each outfit is complete with necessary accessories ready to run.

Must Finish the Game.

In a small country town there once lived a couple of young fellows who had gone into partnership in a barber's business, and in order to pass the time one particularly dull afternoon Tom proposed to Dick that they indulge in a quiet game of "nap." The quiet game went on hour after hour, and when the shades of night had fallen for some time neither of them noticed that a customer had entered. He surveyed them in silent contempt for some minutes.

"Sorry if I interrupt," he said, acidly, at last, "but I'm in a hurry. Which of you fervid sportsmen is going to shave me?"

Tom looked over the hand which had just been dealt him. Then, in a voice full of suppressed excitement, he said:

"Just one moment, sir. Wait until we see who owns this shop?"

The Enigma of the Eel.

Some not very old beliefs include the notion that horse-hair steeped in water turns to eels, that they generate in the gills of other fish, or in the bodies of dead mammals thrown into water, but perhaps the most startling, if absurd, theory was advanced by David Cairncross, a working man whose observation lacked the steady power of scientific training. In a treatise on "The Origin of the Silver Eel," published in or about 1862, he fixed upon the water-beetle as the progenitor of the eel. Another equally absurd belief prevailed that the eels were spontaneously generated from the dew of May. This belief originated in the fact that new-cut turfs folded and placed in such a river as the Severn in the month of May would, on removal from the water, be found to swarm with tiny eels.—The Graphic.

The Origin of Oxygen.

That eminent scientist, the late Lord Kelvin, maintained that all the oxygen in the atmosphere probably originated from the action of sunlight upon plants. When our earth was a globe of hot liquid, it contained no vegetable fuel and probably no free oxygen. But as it cooled off plants appeared on its surface, and these began to evolve oxygen through the medium of the sunbeams. Upon the oxygen thus derived we depend for the maintenance of life by breathing. When we burn coal or other vegetable fuel we use up oxygen, and it is to plants again that we owe the restoration of the oxygen thus lost to the air. If they failed to keep up a sufficient supply the atmosphere would gradually part with its oxygen, and the inhabitants of the earth would disappear in consequence of asphyxiation.

Apart from politics we have had two great men in Canada within the past forty years—these were Principal Grant and Goldwin Smith. They worked in different fields, but they had an influence on the thought and life of this country such as no other two men have had. It may be very many years before we look upon any so great.

Ottawa Journal.

After all the recent frost was an ultimate benefit, seeing, as one authority puts it, for every prospective head of grain destroyed by the frost, the cold also destroyed embryo grubs and caterpillars which, had they been allowed to live to a maturity, would eat probably an hundred times the amount. So once again its an ill wind that blows nobody good.

Hamilton Spectator.

That young lawyer, Robinette, who succeeded so well in his effort to save the life of the murderer Blythe, is at it again in the case of an Italian condemned to hang during the last week of June. It begins to look as if we will have to make some new law to meet the case of this man Robinette, unless we are prepared to give up the idea of capital punishment altogether.

Goderich Signal.

A contemporary utters a timely warning against the tendency of young people to leave school at an early age. It points to the peculiar fact that when times are good there is a greater disposition on the part of boys to leave school than there is when times are bad. The prospect of wages is a strong enticement, but it is well for the boy who does not yield if he is not forced by the exigencies of his circumstances. The additional education may not always be a money-making power, but the man with a good education is, as a rule, capable of doing better work than one with a poor education, and the educated man has sources of enjoyment and power which the poorly educated does not possess, outside of ability to earn good wages or to acquire wealth.

Why the Audience Laughed.

At a public entertainment recently a conjurer had an experience which was highly comical, though quite disastrous from a professional point of view. Having produced an egg from a previously empty bag, he announced that he would follow up this trick by bringing from the bag the hen that laid the egg. This little arrangement he left to his confederate to carry out. He proceeded to draw the bird from the bag, but what was his surprise on finding that the alleged hen was an old rooster, which strutted about the stage with ruffled feathers and offended dignity and set up as vigorous a crowing as if it had just awakened from its nocturnal slumbers. The whole audience shrieked with laughter, and the unfortunate conjurer made a bolt for the dressing room.

Making Alloys Is an Art.

Great art is requisite in making alloys. It is true that they are readily formed by melting metals together in a crucible or in properly constructed furnaces, but it is necessary to insure perfect fusion and to prevent loss. Zinc is a volatile, inflammable metal and easily catches fire. Indeed, it is not at all uncommon to find that two alloys of exactly the same component parts differ very materially in properties in consequence of a difference in the mode of preparation or in the care bestowed upon them.

The estimated population of Canada a year ago last March was 7,185,000.

CURED OF CONSTIPATION

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box.

ing efforts right with the St. Thomas Journal and then more conspicuously with The Montreal Herald won for him unreserved recognition and admiration. In this calamity unprecedented in the history of the Press in Canada he has the sympathy of his fellow-journalists in fullest measure.

Vancouver Sunset.

The oath is an echo of the intolerance and religious hatreds of the seventeenth century. It reveals the mental attitude of both Protestant and Catholic bigots of that troublesome time, and is unworthy of the Christian ideals of the twentieth century. The object of the oath is to ensure the Protestant succession to the throne, but this should surely be easily provided without stigmatizing any part of any religion as superstitious and idolatrous. What descent-minded citizen would think of hurling such an insult at his neighbor? Are we not all taught to respect the opinions and conscience of one another? Why, then, should the sovereign be compelled to make an oath which is an offence to every Catholic in the empire; one too, which there is very good reason to think he does not himself believe.

Painful Stitches In The Back.

The Certainty of Fate.

The Mohammedans have a fable which they repeat to illustrate the certainty of fate.

A sultan was once asked by his favorite, the grand vizier, for permission to leave at once for Smyrna, although a brilliant court life was then in progress. Upon being asked his reason for such haste the vizier replied:

"Because I just saw the angel of death yonder in the crowd. He looked at me so earnestly that I know he has come for me. I wish to escape him."

"Go! Go at once!" said the sultan, who then beckoned to the angel and asked why the latter had looked so earnestly at the vizier.

"I was wondering," replied the angel of death, "why he was here, for I have orders to kill him in Smyrna."

A Stroke of Business.

A writer who was very intimate with Frank R. Stockton says that when the Stockton family lived in Bucks County, Pa., Frank and his brother had a dog which they trained solely to hunt cats. The brothers were overhauled one day by a farmer whose cat they were chasing. To placate the farmer they gave him a dollar for a pig, which they took home. By driving away their father's pigs at feeding time they soon made their own fattest pig in the pen and sold him at a profit of $7. Frank R. Stockton always considered the deal a tribute to his business acumen.

Meyerbeer and Thunder.

Meyerbeer, like Handel, composed best in a thunderstorm. He had a room made at the top of his house with glass roof and sides, so that he might enjoy these conditions to the full whenever they presented themselves. It is said that no least of the field, no raven or nightjar, could scent the approach of a storm more unerringly than Meyerbeer, and nothing was allowed to interfere with his solitary enjoyment of it when it arrived. Wherever he was he would leave at the first premonitory rumble.

Special Notice. BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 851 Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Liberty In Three Nations.

An Englishman loves liberty as he does his lawful wife. She is a possession. He may not treat her with much tenderness, but he knows how to defend her. A Frenchman loves liberty like an affianced bride. He will commit a thousand follies for her sake. A German loves liberty like his old grandmother. And yet the surly Englishman may some day in a fit of temper put a rope around her neck, and the inconstant Frenchman may become unfaithful to his adored one, but the German will never quite abandon his old grandmother. He will always keep a nook for her in the chimney corner, where she can tell her fairy tales to the listening children.—Heinrich Heine.

Would Drown All Sounds.

The agent of the apartment house was trying to discourage him from applying for a flat. "Your nerves would be ruined," said the agent. "There is a phonograph on the second floor that runs day and night." "Dot was nuttin's," responded the little man in the red and blue cap.

JEWS IN PALESTINE.

They Favor Agricultural Labor and Have Splendid Schools.

According to David Wolffsohn, a Cologne banker and one of the leaders of the Zionist movement, many Jews are being repatriated from the United States to Palestine. Herr Wolffsohn said recently that Zionism is growing with tremendous strides; that the society has a membership exceeding 250,000, and that financially the condition of the society is more than encouraging.

"We have now abandoned mere theory, and are devoting our attention to work," he said. "We have had gratifying results. For instance, we have worked hard at the schools in Jerusalem, and the modern young Palestine Jew has a splendid technical and general education."

"Our first care was to make the poorer Jews self-supporting. There were far too many content to rely upon the generosity of devoted pilgrims. Now the state of things is altogether different. Instead of applying for money to the Chahubab, as we call the central relief fund, they ask for work."

"Palestine Jews favor agricultural labor. It is really wonderful to see how they will toil upon their little plot of land and how fruitful they will make the most barren spots."

"Palestine is already becoming a favorite colony for Jews. There are a number of London Jews among the colonists and even Jews from prosperous New York also abandon the commerce of the west for Jerusalem."

"Religious Jews endeavor in their old age to make a pilgrimage to Palestine, so that they may be buried

SHEPHERDS OF PALESTINE.

A Life Which is Almost Ideal In Its Peace and Quiet.

The pastoral life of the Palestine peasant has always been a subject of interest and a pleasant study. The shepherd is seen at his best in the spring when he has the care of both sheep and lambs and when all his thoughts are centered on his seemingly indolent occupation.

Work for the shepherd begins in earnest with the lambing season, which commences early in January and continues for two or three months; during that time it is no unusual sight to see the shepherd with several newly born lambs or kids stored away in the capacious folds of his bosom and the mothers in close attendance.

When heavy storms of snow or rain come on the shepherd of some cave has to be sought and a careful watch against the attacks of wild animals kept. This watchfulness is not relaxed on a fine day, and the long hours on the hillsides or plains are whiled away in making music on the reed flute, of which every shepherd is the maker and player.

The music is an assurance to the sheep that the shepherd is on the alert; let the music cease for any length of time and the flock will stop grazing and look around for their caretaker and leader. At night the sheep are folded around the village or camp to which they belong. The fold is a large enclosure, the wall of which is made up of good sized stones piled one on another. There is only one entrance, which is narrow, for the sheep as they enter have to "pass under the rod" so that the owner may count them and see that none are missing.

To find good pasture and a quiet resting place is the daily duty of the shepherd, and in the long summer days the flock rests during the heat by some stream or under the shadow of a great rock. Each sheep has its name, to which it will respond on being called by its keeper. In southern Palestine the flocks are tended by girls and women, but in other parts by youths and men.

Easy to Arrange.

The poor but honest young man had bearded the millionaire in his den.

"Well," he said, "I want to marry your daughter."

"Impossible, sir, impossible!" exclaimed the old man. "Why, I would rather give up every pound I have than part with my only daughter."

"Oh, very well," calmly rejoined the diplomatic youth; "if that's the way you feel about it I won't be too heavy on you. Just write me out a check for a hundred thousand and we'll let it go at that."

Somewhat Suspicious.

"Why did you refuse me an interview, Mr. Grottox? I only wanted to ask you how you earned your first thousand dollars."

"Excuse me, young man; I thought you wanted to know how I got that last million."

Why Teakwood is Durable.

The teak, which has passed into proverb as the best material for shipbuilding, is superior to all other woods from the fact that it contains an essential oil which prevents spikes and nails driven into it from rusting. This property is not possessed by any other wood in the world and furnishes an explanation of the fact that ships built of teak are practically indestructible. Some have been known to last for 150 years, and when broken up their beams were as sound as when first put together.

Mother's Task.

When mother gets breakfast she must remember that father likes his breakfast food without cream, Johnny wants both cream and sugar, Susie doesn't like breakfast food at all and must have a substitute, Mary has to have grapefruit and the rest of the family want oranges and apples. No two agree on anything, but she must remember what each one wants or the family doubt her devotion. What is it, do you suppose, that keeps the mother of a large family from going crazy?

The Rubber Plant In 1735.

The first accurate information regarding the wonderful rubber plant was furnished by La Condamine, a French scientist who was sent in 1735 by the Government of France to measure an arc of the meridian near Quito. This brought him to the heart of the rubber growing country, and much valuable information was thus obtained.

One on the Doctors.

An anecdote is told of Robert Smith, brother of Sydney Smith, and an ex-Advocate General. On one occasion he engaged in an argument with a physician over the merits of their respective professions.
"I don't say that all lawyers are crooks," said the doctor in his final summing up; "but my opponent will have to admit that his profession doesn't make angels of men."
"No," quietly retorted Smith, "You doctors certainly have the best of us there."

Nervous Prostration For Three Years

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine cured me of a period of nervous prostration of over three years duration, and the Anti-Pain Pills are as necessary to us as the roof of our house. They have been household remedies with us for many years."

Much sickness is due to nervous troubles. Headache, dizziness, epilepsy and insanity are nervous troubles. Then there is a large class of disorders which arise from a weakness of the nerves of an organ or part, as weak lungs, heart, stomach, kidney, bladder, eyes, etc. Dyspepsia and indigestion are usually the result of nervous disorders.

Restorative Nervine

soothes the irritated nerves, and assists the nerve cells to generate nerve force.

"We have now got $1,500,000 together and every day convinces me that the Jew is as passionately enthusiastic about Palestine as his home as ever."

A Student of Canada.

According to a prominent Canadian public official, recently returned from Australia, the good people in America who regard the recent sweeping victory of the "Federal Parliamentary Labor Party" in the Commonwealth as a slap in the face for imperialism, are very much mistaken, for this gentleman met the Hon. Mr. Fisher, and found that he is really a very progressive imperialist. He advocates a very progressive policy in naval and military matters, and even goes so far as to publicly proclaim his belief in universal compulsory military and naval service as the only effective means of national insurance against war, and also as a means of strengthening the national character. Mr. Fisher was very anxious to find out from my informant all he could about Canada's militia system, and had had experienced colonial officers sent to all the leading countries in the world to obtain data to be used in developing the most satisfactory military and naval systems for the Commonwealth. He is a Scotchman by birth, and has all the Scot's enthusiasm for the Empire.

My informant stated that he was surprised to find Mr. Fisher so well informed regarding Canada and Canadian public men. The Australian statesman admitted having studied the lives of Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and said that he had instructed the Australian Parliamentary librarian to procure all the books he could on the development of the Canadian constitution, the national defensive force, and the various departments of the Dominion and Provincial Governments.—Chesterfield in The Family Herald.

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)
Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.
My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy. You could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Miss JAMES RIDDELL, Barry's Bay, Ont.
We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and repay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—that is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

FILLING CREAM PUFFS.

The Salesman Learns Something of a Long Admired Industry.

"From the time I was a very small boy until I began to sell cream of tartar," said the ex-salesman, "I had an overwhelming curiosity to know how they got the filling inside the two articles of diet which as a youngster I liked best in the world—chocolate eclairs and cream puffs. Now that I know I can't understand why with all the thought I gave to the subject I didn't figure it out for myself. It's so simple.

"Of course you don't have to be a baker to know you can't bake an eclair with the filling in it. It's got to be made separately and put in after you've got the shell all made and baked. When I got selling cream of tartar and used to go behind the scenes of the bakeries I found out how they did it. They use a force pump. The pump has a needle-like spout and is filled with soft custard. You stick the point into the eclair, push down your pump handle and the thing is filled. Easy, isn't it? It's such a little hole that you never see it.

"I never got tired watching them work in the bakeries. There would be a big pile of fresh baked shells of eclairs and cream puffs. A man would seize the little pump and in a minute or two have them all filled. Another man would be shaping pies so fast that it made you dizzy. Along would come another man with a wagon full of fillings and fill the pies as fast as the other shoved them along. It's the same way with everything—so different, you know, from mother's methods.

"As for the baker's oven, if you have never seen one you've got a surprise coming. There's only one oven to a bakeryshop generally, and it's as big as a room. How do they get things in and out? Easy, again. They use long poles with a shovel-like arrangement on the end. They put their cakes, or whatever the batch may be, in this, and if they want to they can deposit them on the farther side of the oven, fifteen or twenty feet away. In the same way when a thing is done they reach in over whatever else may be baking and shovel it up."

AN OCEAN OF AIR.

Admirable Description of This Sea In Whose Depths We Live.

We live at the bottom of a mighty sea, says a writer in giving a very entertaining and instructive article on the ocean of air about us. Sometimes from out its clear unswelling depths we behold afar the glittering stars swinging in their everlasting orbits. At other times the sea is dark and murky, and even at noonday we may not see aught of the King of Day save a dull, coppery ball. This ocean is wider and deeper and more easily moved than the aqueous oceans which separate continent from continent.

Sometimes it moves so gently to and fro that the dewdrop on the fragrant rose is undisturbed. At other times it moves with such tremendous violence that mighty oaks, rooted for centuries, are tossed about like pipestems. Sometimes it wafts the white sailed vessels across the sunlit seas to their haven under the hill. Again it bears down upon them with terrible fury and sends them to the harbor of missing ships beneath the seas.

It laps up the water from ocean and river and returns it in beneficent rain and dew. It gives to us the beautiful azure of noonday, and the chromatic glories of sunrise and sunset. It brings the day earlier than it otherwise would come, and holds the sunlight at evening in the twilight's delightful glow. It gives us the breath of life with its abundance of oxygen, and provides for the food that is to be our nourishment, as every morsel of breadstuffs that enters into our beings must be part of the atmosphere.

Its constituents are so nicely and so delicately balanced that a very slight variation in their relative proportions would mean that no human being, constituted as we are at present, could exist at all. It gives us of its substance while we live and when we die it gradually takes back the materials it has loaned us, and we return to the dust whence we sprang. It gives us the glorious sky with its wondrous clouds and shining light and wards off the grim, eternal night that is everywhere a hundred miles above us.

It protects us from the fierce heat of the sun, which would otherwise burn us to a crisp. It wraps its fleecy mantle about us, and keeps away the icy cold of space, 460 degrees below zero. It meets afar the fierce darts of cosmic dust, those wanderers in the eternities of space, and burns them to ashes, before they can pierce us like needle darts moving with a velocity far greater than that of a rifle bullet.

It soothes us to sleep with its gentle, kindly touch, and brings cooling zephyrs to stay the fever that burns the invalid's cheek.

A Bet and Its Odds.

A notorious gambler who died some time ago once wagered a thousand dollars to one that six would not be thrown with a pair of dice ten times in succession. His offer was taken up by a fellow clubman. The dice were brought, and his opponent actually threw six nine times in succession. The gambler then offered $470 to be free of the bet. The other man declined, had his tenth throw and failed to get another six. Just to show how very little the average man knows about the doctrine of chances, a well known mathematician has pointed out the real odds about this bet. The chances were no less than 60,466,175 to 1 against six being thrown ten times in succession. Therefore the real bet should have been about $600,000 to a cent against such a thing happening.

He stood at a street corner and mentally kicked himself.
"I went into a drug store just now," he told a policeman, "and I asked a bold female clerk for some cold cream for my wife. She handed me out this quart jar of the stuff, more than my wife can use in ten years, and charged me a dollar for it. On the way out I saw a stick of twenty-five-cent ice of the same thing. Do you think a man clerk would ever play a customer a trick like that?"

"No, I don't," said the policeman. "Why don't you take it back?"
"And have her look at me this scornful way she would! Don't you ever think it? I wouldn't go inside that store again for $50."

He Got Off Easy.

An elderly dandy was charged with the theft of some chickens. The dandy had the misfortune to be detected by a young and inexperienced attorney, although it is doubtful whether any one could have secured his acquittal, the commission of the crime having been proved beyond all doubt.

The dandy received a pretty severe sentence. "Thank you, sah," said he cheerfully, addressing the judge when the sentence had been announced. "Dat's mighty hard, sah, but it ain't anywhere near what I spected. I thought, sah, dat between my character and dat speech of mah lawyer dat you'd hang me shore!"

The Bundle of Hay.

"How is this, Herr Wirtz?" exclaimed the amazed traveler, going over the items of food and drink on his bill. "You have me charged with a bundle of hay."

"Quite right, quite right," responded the jolly German landlord readily. "You complained last night of the mooing of a cow in the adjoining stable, and I gave her a bundle of hay to quiet her."

Some War Expenses.

The Napoleonic wars cost England $4,320,000,000. The war of 1870 between France and Germany cost $3,300,000,000, and the civil war in the United States exacted $200 million from both sides of over $6,600,000,000. The Boer war cost England over $1,000,000,000, and the struggle between Russia and Japan cost more than twice that sum.

Solving It.

Patrick, a thrifty tradesman in the neighborhood of the Dublin docks, was, the story goes, a man who never spent a penny more than he needed to spend, but he was nevertheless as good a man at the making of an Irish bull as any who lived between Bantry and Ballycastle. Having one day occasion to send a letter to a place some distance, Patrick called a messenger and asked him his price for going such a distance.

"It'll be a shillin'," said the man. "Twice too much," said Patrick. "Let it be sixpence." "Nivver," answered the messenger. "The way is that lonely that I'd nivver go is under a shillin'." "Lonely, is it?" said Patrick, scratching his head. "Faith, an' ye're right. Now, man, I'll tell ye what we'll do. Make it sixpence an' I'll go wid ye to kape ye company."

The First Skaters.

It is very doubtful which race first skated, for traces have been found among prehistoric remains all over northern Europe indicating that the art was practiced by primitive people. The Eskimo of the farthest north are also found to be in possession of runners carved from whalebone. Skating is mentioned by a Danish historian about 1134, and Fitzstephen in his "History of London" says that in the twelfth century young men fastened the leg bones of animals under their feet by means of thongs in order to slide along the ice. This statement is confirmed by the pair of bone skates of the period now in the British Museum. It is likely, however, that these early Londoners got the idea from Holland, probably via Lincolnshire, where skates have been used on the frozen fens from very remote times.

You can use direct or circulating heat for baking in oven

Suppose you are baking in oven by circulating heat (the usual method) and want to use direct heat. Simply do this: Open the slide in the oven bottom. This exposes the oven burners and brings the flames directly under your pans. This is only one of the several new features you'll find on McClary Gas Ranges this year. Go to our nearest agency and see the white enamelled broiler and drip pans, the spring balanced oven and broiler doors, Anti-Rust linings and other new features.

You have your choice of eight different styles of McClary Gas Ranges. Each style can be supplied with or without two burner extension, oven thermometer, water heater, reservoir, high shelf, high closet and canopy top. Can be changed from artificial to natural gas in a few minutes.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

Napabee, June 13th, 1910.

Mrs. R. R. Burleigh,
Emerald P.O.

Dear Madam, We were deeply by the County Council of Lennox and Addington, at its recent session, to write to you on behalf of the members of the Council, a letter of condolence.

The loss of your late husband who, while a member of this Council, enjoyed its highest esteem, was deeply felt by all associated with him in municipal matters. He personally and as representative of Amherst Island, enjoyed the utmost confidence of his fellow Councillors. Believe, dear madam, you have the heartfelt sympathy of the Council and its officials.

Trusting you are enjoying good health, we remain, yours very truly

SMITH GILMOUR, Warden.
W. G. WILSON, County Clerk.

Peruna is the Best Medicine in the World.

I RECOMMEND PE-RU-NA.

MR. EMILE MAROIS.

MR. EMILE MAROIS, 1879 Ontario street, Montreal, Canada, writes:
"After taking nine bottles of Peruna,
I find that I am cured.

"I still take it occasionally. For me it is the best medicine in the world.

"I have recommended it to a number of persons."

M. J. C. Hervus Pelletier, Dept. de l'Agriculture, Ottawa, Ontario, writes:

"The Peruna is particularly efficacious in the cure of catarrhal affections of the lungs and bronchial tubes.

"Six bottles cured me this winter of br nchitis. I am completely restored and I owe thanks to the Peruna.

"I have recommended this remedy to a large number of my friends afflicted with the same trouble, and they have verified my good opinion of this valuable remedy."

Mr. Anderson presented report of Special Committee re Road Superintendents and machinery, which was read and on motion was adopted.

Mr. Anderson presented the report of himself as Chairman of Roads and Bridges Committee, which was read and on motion
was adopted.

On motion Council adjourned till to-morrow at 9 a.m.

THURSDAY.

Council met at 9 a.m., pursuant to adjournment, Warden in the chair.

Members all present.

Minutes of yesterday were read and on motion were confirmed.

Account, Napanee Gas Co., Registry Office,
$1.25, was referred to the County Property Committee.

Account, Napanee Gas Co., Court House,
$6.00, was referred to the County Property
Committee.

Communication, M. R. Reid, P.S.I., asking leave to live at Schenburn for over and then at Shabot Lake, was read, and on motion his request was granted.

A deputation, consisting of Dr. Ward, Dr.
Simpson, W. T. Gilmore, M. C. Bogart, and particularly James Reid, ex M.P.P. for Addington, waited upon the Council and referred to reference to establishing a County Hospital.

Moved by Mr. Longmore, seconded by Mr.
Loyt, that a vote of thanks be tendered the members of the deputation, and also to Mr. W. S. Dettlor, and that the matter of establishing a County Hospital be referred to the Finance Committee to enquire into and report at next session, and that the Clerk forward a copy of this resolution to Mr. Dettlor. Carried.

Communication, A. C. Baker, applying for position as County Auditor, was read, and on motion was laid on the table.

Moved by Mr. Ryan, seconded by Mr.
Alexander, that the Township of Sheffield be allowed to overdraw their account for County Road purposes to the sum of $1,200 to enable them to build a bridge across the Salmon river in the Village of Tamworth this year, same to be charged to the Township of Sheffield County Road account. C'd.

Mr. Allison asked for the yeas and nays.
Yeas—Messrs. Alexander, Allen, Anderson,
Campbell, Gilmore, Hamblly, Longmore, Loyt, Richards, Ryan, Walker, Wartman—13.

Nays—Messrs. Allison and Loyt—2.
Account, Clark Walker, for snow shoveling in Township of Ernestown, $5.65, was presented, and on motion was ordered to be paid and charged to Ernestown County.

from Kaladar, was read and filed.
Mr. M. L. Paul appeared before the Council and reported the result of the efforts of himself and T. G. Carscadden, M.
L.A., to get the County's share of the special grants to Townships, Town and Villages in which County Roads are not situated. Mr. Paul explained fully the stand, taken and after considerable discussion it developed that the Highway Act had been amended subsequent to the endorsement and approval of the County Road system of this County, and it was moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr. Walker, that the Clerk stand, take representatives of this County in the Local Legislature, if necessary, wait upon the Public Works Department and further explain the situation of this County and ask for this County's share retained by the Government. Carried.

Account, T. B. Wallace, 60c, was ordered to be paid.
Moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr.
Hamblly, that whereas a largely signed petition complaining of the present system of road building as well as several other petitions regarding the bad condition of what is known as Close's lane, and other complaints in North Fredericksburgh.

Be it resolved that this Council, through the Warden, instruct the Road Superintendents to use their own judgment in the matter of road building so as to avoid leaving the roads too narrow and high, and we are also of the opinion that clause 2 in By-law No. 204 hinders to a great extent the proper working out of the system of County Roads.

Be it also resolved that By-law No. 204 be amended by striking out clause 2 thereof.

Moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr.
Hamblly, that whereas the largely signed petition having been presented to this Council complaining of the present system of road building as well as several other petitions regarding the bad condition of what is known as Close's lane and other complaints in North Fredericksburgh.

Be it therefore resolved that this Council, through the Warden, instruct the Road Superintendents to use their own judgment in the matter of road building, so as to avoid leaving the roads too narrow and high.
Lost.

Account, Kaladar, Anglesa and Effingham, $15.00, was ordered to be paid.

On motion Council adjourned till 2 p.m.

Council resumed.

Mr. Ryan presented the first report of the Finance Committee, which was read and on motion was adopted, and that a by-law in conformity therewith be presented.

Moved by Mr. Hamblly, seconded by Mr.
Anderson, that the present system of County Roads is not working to the satisfaction of a large number of ratepayers of the County as shown by the largely signed petition presented to this Council. We are of the opinion that County Roads should be abandoned, owing to the provisions in the Act for the improvement of Public Highways, which provides that County Roads assumed under the said Act cannot be abandoned until three years after the completion thereof and then only by consent of two-thirds of the municipalities interested therein. We would recommend that a by-law for the abandoning of County Roads be submitted to the ratepayers of the several municipalities in which County Roads are situated at the next ensuing municipal elections, and in the event of the said by-law receiving a majority vote in each of the said municipalities that County Roads be abandoned forthwith, except that the County be responsible for any damage which happens on said roads for one year, so as to let repair before the passing of the by-law that said County Roads shall be assumed by the respective municipalities. Carried.

Mr. Longmore asked for the yeas and nays.

Yeas—Messrs. Allen, Allison, Anderson,
Campbell, Hamblly, Irish, Loyt, Reid,
Richards, Ryan, Wartman, 11.

Nays—Messrs. Gilmore, Longmore, Walker—
3.

Mr. Allen presented a by-law to allow the Camden Rural Telephone Co. to erect poles along County Roads, which was read first time.

On motion rule 38 was suspended in order to go into the Committee of the Whole on the second reading of the by-law, and on motion Council went into Committee of the Whole, Warden in the chair.

By-law was read second time, and on motion the Committee rose and reported, and
the report of the Committee was adopted.

On motion rule 38 was again suspended in order to give the by-law its third reading, and on motion rule 38 was read a third time, numbered 256, signed by the Warden and Clerk, sealed and finally passed.

Mr. Hamblly presented a by-law to allow certain residents in North Fredericksburgh along County Roads to erect poles for telephone purposes, which was read first time.

On motion rule 38 was suspended in order
to go into the Committee of the Whole on
the second reading of the by-law, and on motion Council went into the Committee of the Whole on the second reading of the by-law, Warden in the chair.

By-law was read second time, and on motion the Committee rose and reported, and
the report of the Committee was adopted.

Rule 38 was again suspended in order to give the by-law its third reading.

By-law was read third time, numbered 257, signed by the Warden and Clerk, sealed and finally passed.

Moved by Mr. Campbell, seconded by Mr.
Irish, that Denbigh, Abner and Ashby have a special grant of $35.00 on roads, and Kaladar, Anglesa and Effingham have a special grant on $45.00. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Longmore, seconded by Mr.
Irish, that a special grant of $100.00 be made to each of the County Road accounts,
North Fredericksburgh and Richmond. C'd.

Moved by Mr. Richards, seconded by Mr.
Ryan, that a special grant of $25.00 be made to each of the County Road accounts,

North Fredericksburgh and Richmond. C'd.

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE RE

IRVINE PARKS, TOWN OF

TREASURER

To the County Council.

Gentlemen, We, your Committee, to whom was referred the matter of a draft letter of condolence to the friends of a late Treasurer, beg leave to present the following draft.

"Napanee, June 12th, 1910.

We, representing the members of the Denbigh and Addington County Council, in Council assembled, at this our first meeting, since the death of our esteemed and trusted Treasurer, Mr. Irvine Parks, wish to place on record how deeply we feel the loss that the County has sustained, and while we bow in humble submission to the will of the Divine Providence, we wish to extend to the friends and relatives our hearty sympathy in their great loss.

We further desire to report that the Warden and Clerk officially sign this above letter of condolence, and further that a copy of this report is given to the press for publication.

Signed on behalf of this Council.

SMITH GILMORE, Warden.

An Oversight.

An old German market of violencel-les had just finished one which he considered to be a particularly fine piece of work, and he proudly lifted it up for a friendly musician who was standing near him to admire. He had just called attention to its beautiful lines when all of a sudden something rattled.

"Ach," he exclaimed, "I have left der glue put inside!"

disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicines, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—rushing sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago.
I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Medical science, social progress and human idealism have sustained a severe loss in the death of Dr. Robert Koch, one of the few creators of the "new" medicine. It is difficult for the average layman—nay, even for the average physician—fully to realize, at this time, the nature and magnitude of Koch's services to the human race. We look upon a different world now as compared with the world which presented itself to the fighters of disease in the pre-Koch pre-Pasteur era. We have totally different ideas on the ill mortal flesh is heir to, and they are ideas that spell hope, faith, courage, infinite possibilities of prevention, arrest of dreaded plagues, simple but effective treatment by the application of nature's remedies.

It is not for a lay newspaper to estimate the value of Koch's discoveries and theories in connection with tuberculosis, cholera, the fatal sleeping sickness, and so on. It is, however, proper to emphasize the moral and human qualities of so single-minded, brave, indefatigable a scientist. Koch had a passion for research and the genius of taking pains in addition to a brilliant and original mind. He labored and toiled with the perseverance of a Darwin, and he never thought of reward of any sort—not even of fame and popularity. He did not hesitate to oppose an entire world's congress of his colleagues, and when he was told that "science repudiated" a certain contention of his he calmly and modestly demanded evidence—more evidence and still more evidence—in refutation of his own. His stand commanded the admiration even of aggressive opponents.

Koch was one of the heroes of peace and industrial civilization. He lived for humanity and its health and happiness. He was instrumental in saving millions of his fellow men, and it is to be hoped that his life and career will serve to inspire thousands of physicians and students in generations to come.

The world will hear, with a sense of relief, that anarchy has officially divorced itself from assassination. An anarchist convention, sitting in Germany, has resolved almost unanimously that hereafter anarchistic doctrine shall be disseminated only by means of peaceful persuasion.

In due time any theory, however violent, may be trusted to rub itself down to a reasonable conformity with that stable condition called Things as They Are. Everything tends to gravitate toward the

THE FLAME AND THE STAKE

Still Used in Spirit by Those Who Call Themselves Defenders of the Faith

"Let us not love in word, neither with the tongue, but in deed and truth."—I. John iii., 18.

All the divergencies and quarrels of religion have been over its forms, ceremonies, and its definitions, and never at all over its life and works. Men fight bitterly over its philosophies and go forth to walk side by side united in its practice. The blackest passions of the pit are easily aroused over religious differences of opinion, while the fairest flowers of our world spring out of its expression in life.

The deeds that stain most deeply the pages of the past were done in the name of religion, for the sake of its creeds or its institutions or its ceremonies; the height of human heroism, devotion, and service, the noblest levels of our living have been reached in the name and spirit of religion. Perverted this spirit has dragged men to the blackest shame; followed in spirit and truth they have found in the way of life.

In our own day if you would see the human spirit at its meanest, if you would see the gall of bitterness and the vials of hatred poured out without compunction you must witness a theological battle or a heresy trial. To defend their own conception of the Deity men will violate freely every one of

THE DIVINE LAWS.

The emphasis on forms of words, on precise agreements in philosophical definitions, and the anxiety about conformity to creed are all due to a lack of faith, to real religion being at a low ebb in those who wear its guises, due to an unwillingness to have confidence that this world is a right world, that the divine rules here through all its laws and that truth can never be overcome.

To the Infinite Being what ridiculous pygmies the heresy hunters must seem to be; mites inflated with their own conceit. Men who have caught the seeming color of one thread from the garment of truth and holding it aloft cry: "This is all the truth and the only truth; swear to it or, if you even hesitate, the great Judge of all will consign you to eternal damnation."

The reason the thousands, millions, of men go on heedless of that awful warning is that we all know it cannot be true; we have faith to believe that it is a lie, that it is false to eternal truth and because we know that the all important things for us all are not the forms of words but the works and ways of our lives. Our elemental conceptions of right lie too deep to be disturbed by arrogant denunciations even in the name of religious truth.

While the amateur theologians wage their mimic but bitter warfare the great world goes on, men suffer and sympathize, they bend beneath burdens and they lift them; the woes and joys of life engross their hearts and they taste of the gall of bitterness and enter the

they live and the great things of religion become real to them, so real they cannot be described.

But for the bitterness in the struggle and the shrill cries of the combatants in this dialectic battle the world would never know it was being waged; it is utterly indifferent to it, not because it cares so much more for truth and reality than for forms of words. Life is so large and real that there is no time to waste, no breath to spend in word splitting.

Let no man beguile you with words. Words are ever the refuge of the life that has not blood enough to work; when a man gets too tired to do the right he usually turns to defining it and prescribing it for others. And all his vociferous brandings of Heresy and Heretic are only words. They weigh nothing. One has but to go on doing the right; if he seeks light this way it will be found of him.

There is more religion in any minute in the life of the street and the market than could be found in all the ponderous tomes of theology, more godliness in the homes and shops, in the hidden lives that are loyal to duty, lived for love and the right, than in all the defenses of the faith that were ever elaborated. There never will be any other religion than this, the religion of living out our best, that is worth the having.

Lesson XII. The Parable of the Sower, Matt. 13, 1-9, 18-23. Golden Text James 1, 21.

Verse 1. On that day—Evidently on the same day as the events given in the latter part of the twelfth plains them as "Satan" (Mark), the devil (Luke), and as here.

The way side—According to the Jewish fashion, a path led through the midst of a field of grain. This would naturally become hard and beaten by the trampling of many feet, of men and beasts. This may represent a certain lightness of mind, or too exclusive attention to the calls of the world. So the word does not get in deep, and the evil one straightway snatcheth it away. The voice of the messenger is barely silent before the memory is as clear of the truth as if it had

HOME.

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Chopped Apples and Nuts. — Wash, core and chop nice apples, fill the dishes, sprinkle with chopped nuts, and serve with cream.

Spinach and Eggs.—Boil half peck of spinach until tender, drain and chop fine. Add a little flour and milk and a pinch of sugar, salt, and nutmeg. And lay in a buttered baking dish. Beat five eggs just enough to break the yolks and pour over the spinach, add a pinch of salt to the eggs. Bake ten minutes in the oven. The same recipe can be used for asparagus. Cut off the tender ends and season well with pepper and salt and a piece of butter.

Grapefruit Marmalade. — One grapefruit, two oranges, one lemon. Cut both peel and pulp fine, cover with as much water as there is fruit, and let stand over night. In the morning boil briskly ten minutes, then set aside for twenty-four hours. At the end of this time add four pounds of sugar and cook slowly until it jells. This makes twelve glasses and is inexpensive and delicious.

Cream Asparagus.—To cream asparagus, have it all tender but the tips not "mushy," and to use every bit of the tender part, prepare in the following manner: Wash and break off the tips and keep separate. Break the remainder in small pieces, stopping as soon as it ceases to snap brittly. Then peel the outer skin of the remaining pieces and break in pieces, stopping as soon as it ceases to be tender. Throw all but the tips in boiling, salted water and boil gently for about ten minutes, then add the tips. This saves them from being overcooked while you are endeavoring to cook the tougher portions until tender. Cook until all are done, drain, and pour over them a sauce made of flour, butter, and milk that has been cooked and stirred until smooth. Just before serving pour cream over the whole preparation, which will make it as rich as though the sauce has been made with cream and is less expensive. Several who have eaten this pronounce it better than the whole tips with drawn butter.

STRAWBERRIES.

Strawberry Pyramid.—One pint of hot boiled rice. Place a layer of it, well seasoned with butter, on a round plate; decorate edge if possible with small strawberry leaves. Cover rice with strawberries well sugared, then a layer of rice, and so on, forming the pile into the shape of a pyramid. Finish top with a spray of berries. Serve cold with sweetened whipped cream.

Strawberry Pie.—Cream three-fourths of a cupful of butter with a cupful of granulated sugar, then add the well beaten yolks of three eggs and half a cupful of cold water. Sift together two cupfuls of flour and two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat the butter smooth and lightly fold in the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs. Divide the batter in two portions and violent, may be trusted to rub itself down to a reasonable conformity with that stable condition called Things as They Are. Everything tends to gravitate toward the established level. The lesser body affects the larger, but is itself affected to a greater degree. Socialism was once regarded as a menace, yet, when brought face to face with practical responsibilities, it is found to be steadied and sobered and robbed of all its terrors—except loquacity. Anarchy now seems to be setting its feet in a like path. A segregated anarchistic state would give this over-energized movement its quietus. The need of an ordered government, whatever its shortcomings and injustices, would at once become apparent.

The official anarchist body may fail to put the clamps on its dispersed free lances. Indeed, the convention at Halle could not completely control its own members; the chief recalcitrant, a woman, declared that anarchy could not successfully dispense with murder. However, relief to these surcharged theorists has for years come freely—too freely—both in word and deed, and the time is doubtless at hand when a sedative like that involved in the resolution just passed may help to promote their cure. The decision will be welcomed by a few dozen of the world's great, against whom little except their own reluctant conspicuousness can be urged.

IMMUNE TO SNAKE POISON.

The Lerot Showed No Ill Effects of Viper Bite.

The remarkable combat of the Indian mongoose with venomous snakes, in which it always comes off victor, are well known. The fact that it invariably survives has led to the suggestion that it is immune to snake poison. Other animals said to be immune are the pig and the hedgehog, says the London Globe.

With regard to the mongoose, indeed, this immunity has been proved, and if bitten it is said to fall a victim as rapidly as other animals. If this be true, then it must owe its victories to its wonderful agility in avoiding the bites of the reptile. However, this may be, some recent experiments of M. G. Billard show that an animal of the dormouse family must be added to the list of the immune.

This animal is known as the lerot and is said to fight fiercely with vipers. M. Billard injected large doses of viper's poison into the lerot and found that no ill effects followed. On one occasion, again, one of them was bitten badly on the eye by a viper and no signs of poisoning followed. There can, then, be no doubt that the lerot is immune to snake poison.

Beware of your victims. You can't trust a victim out of sight.

Sower, Matt. 13. 1-9, 18-23. Garden Text James 1. 21.

Verse 1. On that day—Evidently on the same day as the events given in the latter part of the twelfth chapter.

Out of the house—Neither this nor the particular day is mentioned by Mark. In chapter 12: 47, "outside" means on the outskirts of the crowd, so that we are left to conjecture that this was the house of Simon and Andrew (Mark 1. 29).

Sat by the sea side—Chrysostom, whose Homilies on the Gospel of Saint Matthew are full of homely wisdom, says here: "He sits by the sea fishing and getting into his net them that are on the land. The cause of his doing this is a desire to order his auditory with exactness, and to leave no one behind his back, but to have all face to face."

3. He spoke . . . in parables—Some have already been recorded; the salt and the light, the fowls and the lilies, the wise and the foolish builders, but they have been brief and incidental. From now on this method of teaching becomes more elaborate, and forms a large part of the instructions of Jesus.

Behold, the sower—Christ. It is fitting that the group of parables should start off with this one, in which so many important issues of the kingdom come to test. It is one of the three which appear in Matthew, Mark, and Luke, the other being those of the mustard seed and the wicked husbandmen. Also it is one of those whose interpretation we have from our Lord's own lips.

Went forth to sow—It is presumed that an actual sower and an actual field were in sight at the time.

4. As he sowed—For the meaning of the parable, see comments below on verses 18-23.

5. He cast both ears—It is a challenge to serious thought, and a keen observation of Jesus. Only those whose hearts are singly open to the truth can perceive its spiritual meanings.

6. Hear then ye—Strong emphasis on the pronoun: "Do you, therefore, hear the parable of the sower." Jesus warns the disciples against the shallowness, worldliness, and diffidence which are the indication of a barren heart. Notice that Matthew omits the rebuke contained in Mark 4. 13. It is not so much a parable of the sower, who seems not to occupy a prominent place in the story, as of the soils, four different kinds of which are mentioned. Though Christ is the Sower, and the seed he sows is the truth, the result clearly depends upon the nature of the soil.

19. The word of the kingdom is, of course, the seed. The warning of Jesus. "Take heed how ye hear," would apply here. He that heareth and understandeth not is the man whose mind grasps the words one by one but whose heart does not "take in" and treasure up the truth, understanding, in the Old Testament and New, being a matter of the heart rather than of the head.

The evil one—We might have interpreted the birds (verse 4) as impersonal temptations, but Jesus expressly, in spite of the plural, exposed to the calls of the world. So the word does not get in deep, and the evil one straightway snatcheth it away. The voice of the messenger is barely silent before the memory is as clear of the truth as if it had never been spoken. Yet Jesus would incite the preacher of truth not to neglect even so unpromising a soil.

20. The rocky places—Here we find a thin soil atop of a hard substratum. This class is common, especially in times of religious awakening—people whose emotions are quickly stirred, who receive with joy the word to which, for one reason or another, they happen to be particularly susceptible, but whose nature and profession are too shallow for the truth to take deep root. They will hold out so long as conditions are favorable. But, when called upon to suffer tribulation (2) for the sake of what they profess, straightway they stumble. Our regard for the truth must go into the depths of our nature and take hold of every part of us, for, to be a Christian involves the shock of many a stern encounter with conditions which easily uproot seed thinly planted.

22. Among the thorns—Here is excellent soil, but, sadly enough, it is infested with the seed of sin and error. What chokes the word, in men of this type, is not the world, but a false relation to the world. Mark adds "the lusts of other things," and Luke, "the pleasures of this life." The endless petty worries of business life, the subtle allurements of those mistaken paths which are so easily opened by riches—these, if indulged in, or compromised with, or surrendered to, are bound to crowd out the choicest spiritual growth. The tragedy of this class of people is that their fruitfulness might be second to none, but instead they turn out only a rank crop of brambles.

23. The good ground—It is noteworthy that all that is required is that the soil should be of the sort that not only eagerly receives but stores up and nourishes the truth. Even then the results are different with different soils. However good a man may be, the seed may fail to expand when received in his heart more than thirtyfold, while his neighbor, because perchance of better endowment of one kind or another, though no better a man, may bring forth a hundred-fold.

GOOSE OF "COLDSTREAMS"

Perhaps the most curious regimental pet on record was Peter, the goose of the Coldstream Guards. Peter served with the regiment throughout the rebellion in Canada, and was a rare favorite with the soldiers. When the guard was mounted each morning Peter always marched with them. One of the most novel sights in London, when the Guards came home, was to see Peter strutting at the head of the regiment, when on parade. Unfortunately Peter was run over and killed by a cab while doing "sentrygo," as was his custom, in front of the guard-house. His remains are still preserved, the neck being decorated with a collar bearing the words, "Died on duty."

eggs and halt a cupful of cold water. Sift together two cupfuls of flour and two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat the butter smooth and lightly fold in the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs. Divide the batter in two portions and bake in layer cake tins. If specks of butter are placed between the layers they may be both baked in one tin. Make a filling of one cupful of strawberries, crushed, and half a cupful of blanched, chopped almonds and the whites of two eggs sweetened with half a cupful of sugar as you beat them stiff. Ornament top of the cake with a few fine berries dusted with powdered sugar and serve hot or cold with cream whipped.

Strawberry Divinity Pie.—Make a rich pie paste and line a deep pie pan and bake in a brisk oven. If your berries are large cut them in two and place in the baked shell and cover berries with sugar as for shortcake. Have ready a custard, cooled, made as follows: One tablespoonful of cornstarch, one pint of milk, two eggs, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, and small piece of butter. Heat milk to near boiling, then add the eggs, well beaten, with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Let it boil up once or twice, stirring all the time; take off and flavor to suit your taste. Pour this custard over the strawberries and over this put a meringue made as follows: Beaten whites of two eggs, six tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar, added one spoonful at a time. Flavor same as custard. Place in the oven only long enough to brown the meringue.

SMALL CAKES.

Plain Cookies.—One-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of lard, two cupfuls of sugar, two eggs, three-fourths cupful of sour cream, one teaspoonful soda, one pinch salt, nutmeg, and vanilla flavoring. Flour, not too stiff.

Fruit Rolls.—Three cupfuls of flour, six tablespoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-third cupful of butter, one cup milk, two tablespoonfuls sugar, and one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, rub in the butter with the tips of the fingers, add the milk gradually, cutting with a knife to a soft dough. Turn the dough on a floured board, and roll into a rectangular sheet about one-third inch in thickness. Brush over the sheet of dough with melted butter, then sprinkle with the cinnamon and chopped raisins. Roll up the dough compactly and cut the roll in pieces an inch in thickness. These are delicious.

Johnny Cake.—One cupful flour, one-half cupful cornmeal, one tablespoonful sugar, one teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful baking soda. Sift all together, then add one and one-fourth cupfuls sour milk or buttermilk, beat until smooth, pour into a greased pan, and bake for about twenty minutes in a quick oven.

CURTAINS.

To Prevent Curtains Sagging.—When the lace curtains are ready to be washed, baste a narrow strip of muslin along each outer edge and let it remain until the washing and drying process is completed.

Curtain Hints.—On a nice warm day take your curtains that will not stand for stretching, wash and starch them, then while wet put them on their curtain rods and hang them in sunny windows; then stretch them down and sideways enough to smooth them out a little; then raise the windows top and bottom to let the air or wind move them to and fro, and in no time your curtains will be dry and look as nice as when stretched. Think of the time you save. In the summer time this is an easy method.

USEFUL HINTS.

In wiping the kitchen range use a small bag as a glove.

Paper bags, which accumulate so fast, may be put to good use in the kitchen.

To brown pie crust: Wash over top crust with a little milk. Makes it a nice light brown.

When soaking mackerel or other salt fish see that the skin side is placed uppermost.

Keep doughnuts and cookies in a covered crock and they will remain moist much longer.

Rolls may be re-warmed and made crisp and good if placed in a paper bag in a hot oven.

A large apron for covering the skirt to be used for bedmaking can be made from half a discarded sheet.

When cleaning house a convenience is a stick with a notch in the end to lift picture cords from hooks.

If the sides are sewed together and the sheets cut through the center it will be given a new lease of life.

The flat taste of boiled water may be removed by pouring from one pitcher to another in the open air.

Lumbago is greatly relieved by bandaging with a flannel bag filled with very hot salt where the pain is felt.

Pans greased with butter will make the bottom crust of pies soft and flaky and prevent them from being soggy.

Celery can be much improved by soaking it for an hour in ice-cold water in which a lemon has been squeezed.

To remove ink stains from linen, place the marked linen in a saucer of milk, and the following day in water.

When peeling oranges start from the end where the stalk has been, and the pith will come off with the outer skin.

Wash the lamp burner twice a month, using a lather of warm water, ammonia and soap. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

When cooking onions, set a tin cup of vinegar on the stove, and let it boil, and no disagreeable odor will be noticed in the room.

Try and have cross ventilation in your kitchen, and you never will be annoyed by the odor of cooking

"I HOLD A WARRANT"

During my professional career, all sorts of arrests, in the natural course of things, have come my way, writes an ex-detective officer in London Answers.

Arrests are sometimes effected in a quiet, unobtrusive manner, but there are occasions when, in spite of all precautions, a struggle and turmoil ensue.

In making the necessary preliminary inquiries in a case, the delinquent's habits and temperament are specially noted, and the arrest, if possible, is arranged accordingly.

Sometimes a man's relatives—in the case of defaulting officials, for instance—will, after seeing the officer, urge him to come forward and meet the charge, and so contrive to clear the matter up as expeditiously as possible.

This, of course, is the best way; but the dread of incarceration inherent in our natures oftentimes renders such a course obnoxious and repellent.

In all cases much depends on the demeanour of the officer holding the warrant, or effecting the apprehension.

THE BANK-CLERK AT BAY.

I remember, for instance, arresting a young absconding bank-clerk one afternoon, a few days after he had perpetrated a remarkably heavy forgery.

He was seated in a well-known and much-frequented restaurant in Swell-don, partaking of a bottle of champagne in company with a lady friend.

I seated myself at an adjacent table, and quietly made sure of my man. He was talking naturally, and was quite unsuspecting.

I took my refreshment to his table.

"Hallo, S—!" I said. "You don't recognize me?"

"No," he laughed, "I'm dashed if I do!"

"Well," I said, as quietly as possible, "I've a message for you. Just come to the door, will you? It's very important."

He acquiesced, and smilingly accompanied me. I watched him closely. He moved his right hand from his hip-pocket, where he had been feeling, as we arrived at the door, and I seized it and the loaded revolver it was holding.

"Don't be a fool, man!" said I. "Give it me."

He relinquished the weapon, and went quietly to the station as I announced my business.

On another occasion, after I had quietly carried out an apprehension, and the prisoner had begged me to get quickly to the station, he changed his mind en route, and it took the help of four uniformed officers to get him to the place whither he had just expressed extreme willingness to go.

On another occasion, when I made an arrest of a foreigner in a house, instead of acting quietly

NEW BRITISH EMIGRANT

THEY ARE NOT THE POOR AND BROKEN DOWN.

Men and Women of Minds and Means the Mother Country Wants to Keep.

An English writer in the Queen is disturbed over the fact that the emigrants who are now leaving the British Isles are not poor and broken-down, but men "whose muscle, brain and money are a gain to the country of their adoption, but a loss to their native land."

"This new tendency toward a better class of emigrant has just received a striking illustration by the migration of a party of a dozen public school boys now travelling under Dr. Gray, head master of Bradford College, to Canada, there to learn farming and there in due course to take up farms of their own."

"They are going to Dr. Gray's ranch near Calgary, Alberta, and will there have a season of practical farming, going in the winter to an agricultural college for technical training and farming science. After another summer's work on the ranch and probably another winter course of studies at the college it is expected that they will be in a position to start farming for themselves and

ON THEIR OWN LAND.

"This is a class of emigrant that any country would welcome with open arms; and although we have not a word to say against either the scheme or the acquisition by our most thriving and vigorous colony of this potential wealth in blood and money we cannot but feel a vague discontent with the conditions which have rendered necessary or desirable this loss to the motherland of this body of bold young Englishmen."

"The party now in charge of Dr. Gray is going out under the auspices of the Public Schools Immigration League, a body formed only last year, but already in active operation under a committee consisting of the headmasters of Eton, Westminster, Mill Hill and Bradford. The league, which will be sending out public schoolboys this coming summer to British colonies, has framed simple conditions, which apply to each case."

"Thus the boy who elects to become one of these 'first class emigrants' will go out without money and be placed by a member of a local committee with a farmer who understands a lad of gentle birth and good education. The boy will then have to until his practical training qualifies him for admission to an agricultural college. When at work he will receive the usual wages and board and lodging.

"Each boy must have a certificate of fitness signed by his headmaster, showing that he has been industrious at school and possesses a good moral character. A rule of the league provides that no boy shall take capital with him, and lack of capital is not considered

YOUNG FOLKS

GRANDMOTHER'S LAMB.

"A dress of cotton, a sash of silk and a coat of wool," said Grandfather Harris, as he lifted his little granddaughter, Mary, into the big wagon.

"I know all about cotton and silk," declared Mary, proudly. "Cotton grows on a bush and worms make silk."

"Well! well!" exclaimed Grandfather Harris, as if he was very much surprised. "And I suppose Constance knows all about wool?" And he looked at his other little granddaughter, who was already seated beside her sister.

"No-o," answered Constance, reluctantly. "We never thought about wool, did we, Mary?"

Mary shook her head soberly.

"Well, well, I declare!" said grandfather. "And your own grandfather raising wool right on his farm! Why, just as soon as we get to the farm you must see how my wool grows."

"Is it a plant like wheat?" questioned Mary.

Grandfather shook his head smilingly. "I guess you'll be surprised when you see wool growing," he declared.

As soon as they reached the farm and had kissed grandmother, they exclaimed:

"We want to see how wool grows!"

Just then they heard "Baa-ba-a-a!" close beside the porch steps, and looking down, they saw the whitest and prettiest little lamb possible.

"That's my cosset lamb," said Grandmother Harris. "I keep him up near the house, where it is sunny and where I can give him a good drink of warm milk now and then."

Mary and Constance thought the lamb the nicest pet any one could have, and wished very much that they had one at home. After they had patted its head and seen grandmother give it its luncheon of warm milk, they became eager again to see how wool grows.

"Do you see what a nice soft coat this lamb has?" asked Grandfather Harris.

"Yes, indeed," replied the children; but they were looking about at the trees and shrubs, and off across the fields, wondering where the wool-garden was.

"Well," said grandfather, "this soft white coat grows thicker and longer, until it becomes too warm and heavy for the lamb to carry it about; and when the warm days of spring come, the farmer takes a big pair of shears and cuts the warm coat all off, and the sheep capers about, glad to be rid of its burden."

"Does the coat grow again before cold weather?" asked Constance.

"Ye, indeed, warm and fleecy as ever. Now these warm coats that the farmer shears from the sheep are all washed and cleansed, and are taken to a mill and carded and spun and woven into cloth, just as cotton and silk are."

round the teeth, and then rinsing the mouth with warm water.

Try and have cross ventilation in your kitchen, and you never will be annoyed by the odor of cooking foods penetrating other rooms.

When boiled custard is slightly over-cooked it may be brought back to the right consistency if it be thoroughly beaten with an egg-beater.

Raised biscuits should be lightly wiped with butter before putting in the oven so they will separate smoothly and not leave jagged edges.

Twilled sheets, by reason of their softness and substantial weave, make excellent polishing cloths and good undercovers for ironing boards.

In the sickroom there is no end to the possibilities of an old sheet. One-half laid across the bed under the patient will serve as a draw sheet.

Match marks may be removed from white paint by rubbing with a cut lemon. To forestall further marring, smear the spot lightly with vaseline.

Very bad grease spots can be removed by soaking them in benzine and then placing them between double layers of blotting-paper and pressing with a medium hot iron.

A whisk broom is excellent for cleaning and dusting the mattress; the corners of stairways; for dusting away the grime from under radiators and in polishing stoves.

To test tea, burn a small quantity on a metal plate. With good tea the amount of ash remaining is small, increasing in quantity as the quality of the samples tested deteriorates.

Keep a pair of surgical scissors in the ideal kitchen. They are a good labor saver in dicing fruits and vegetables. Dice peppers by cutting off several slivers, the whole length. Hold these firmly and with the scissors slip through the entire bunch.

To make steaks very tender, lay them, before cooking, on a flat dish containing three tablespoonsfuls of salad oil and one of vinegar, well mixed together. Each side of the steak should be soaked for thirty minutes—making an hour in all—just before cooking.

A REGIMENT'S PET.

The regimental pet of the Royal Fusiliers for the last hundred years has always been a goat, and on one occasion the late Queen Victoria presented one to the regiment. One of the Lancer regiments also acquired a goat as a mascot some years ago in South Africa, and this animal went through the Matabele war with the regiment, and though several times under fire escaped without a scratch. The 17th Lancers—the "Death or Glory" boys—had, until a short time ago, a large black bear with white markings; but she became bad tempered, and so it was thought advisable to present her to the Dublin Zoo.

"I say, old man, what's good for my complaint?" asked a sufferer from insomnia. "I haven't closed my eyes for five nights." "Go in for boxing," replied his friend. "The first time I tried it my eyes were closed for a week!"

On another occasion, when I made an arrest of a foreigner in a house, instead of acting quietly and sensibly, as I had been informed he would, he seized a huge French kitchen-knife and threatened to carve me up if I ventured to approach him.

He was a huge fellow, and looked ferocious enough, in all conscience; but I laughed at him and pointed out that I was not to blame in the matter, being merely an instrument of the law, which he had broken. If he did me harm, I also pointed out, there were other officers who would eventually carry out the law's bidding.

He finally gave in, and we left the house together in quite a friendly and companionable manner.

THE COINER CAPTURED.

Many criminals invariably make the best of things on apprehension, treating the occurrence merely as a matter of luck, in accordance with the "run" they have had—meaning, of course, the length of time they have been at large.

In arresting a notorious coiner one afternoon I entered the backyard of the premises, accompanied by an assistant. We quietly opened the yard door and crept into the house. The man's wife was in the back room downstairs, reading a novelette. The door was ajar. We entered noiselessly, but she looked up as the door was silently shut by my assistant, and went off into a dead faint without a murmur.

Leaving her there, we crept to the upper front room. This door was also ajar. There was no sound in the house. We were entirely guided by the smell of cigarette-smoke.

As we crept forward, the counterfeits were visible, in shallow baths on the stove, taking up the necessary silver-plating.

In a few steps, still without sound, I placed my hand on his shoulder nearest me. He fainted dead away.

An easy capture!

SOUNDS FAMILIAR.

The distinction of being the worst class of washerwomen all the world over belongs, it is said, to washermen—the "dhobies" of India. The methods of the dhobie are far from gentle. He collects the clothes, and dumps them into a trough of soap-and-water, and vigorously jumps up and down on them, changing the water now and again. Next, he goes to the nearest washing-pool, and there he really gets to work. He seizes a garment, well soaked, whirls it around his head, and bangs it on a hard, flat stone. Off flies a button. Another soak, another whirl, and a bang follow, and another button goes. When sufficient damage is done, the garment is clean, and ready to be repaired. All of which sounds precisely like the operations we believe our best things have gone through when we get them back from "the wash."

showing that he has been industrious at school and possesses a good moral character. A rule of the league provides that no boy shall take capital with him, and lack of capital is not considered by it as a bar to his progress.

"At the same time there is little or no doubt but that most of the lads so-emigrating will after the two years' training invest considerable sums in colonial farmlands. That the league is in earnest is evidenced by the fact that with the aid of a strong committee in South Africa they are now organizing a Settlers Emigration Society, which will pay special attention to the immigration of public schoolboys in that part of the empire.

"Not only are the majority of these who are now crowding every vessel bound for Canada or Australia sturdy specimens of British bone and muscle, but are often possessed of considerable capital. Nor are the new emigrants confined to the steerage or even second class passengers; many men of

are to be found on these outward-bound vessels.

Last year 220,000 odd emigrated from Great Britain; of these persons 27,000 went to Australia, 85,000 to Canada and over 100,000 went to the United States. Of these emigrants there remained permanently in the respective countries 17,000, 52,000 and 56,000, the United States thus getting more British emigrants than any British colony—a result not merely to be deplored, but amended.

"Nearly all of the Colonial Agents-General tell of the high class of emigrant now proceeding or in treaty to go to their respective colonies. Thus one official tells of a London publisher and of a city doctor who are buying land in Canada, the one with a capital of £19,000 and the other with £39,000 to be invested in that country. Two ladies, with a capital of £20,000, are going out to Alberta with the intention of farming. A young man is sent by his father—a builder—with £500, and if he reports well of the new land his father and family are to follow with £5,000.

"And so the tale goes on—from the professional man and the woman of gentle birth, or the son of rich parents and of costly upbringing, to the honest mechanic with a hundred pounds, or the laborer with his savings of forty or fifty. Again we say that if all this wealth of sinew and cash were going to the British colonies alone there might be no complaint on the part of the imperialist, but when a large proportion of it goes to an alien soil there is undoubtedly cause for questioning, if not complaint."

A HUGE BAROMETER.

The largest barometer in the world was recently set up in the Italian town of Faenza, the birthplace of Torricelli, who discovered the barometer and the "vacuum" which perpetuates his name. The liquid used is purified oil rendered free from air, and this gives a column over eleven metres in height. Owing to the very small amount of evaporation an oil barometer is much more accurate than one filled with any other liquid except mercury, and the long column makes it very sensitive.

the farmer shears from the sheep are all washed and cleansed; and are taken to a mill and carded and spun and woven into cloth, just as cotton and silk are."

Both the little girls looked at him wonderingly for a moment, and then Constance gave a little skip and exclaimed, "Wool!"

"And it grows on lambs!" declared Mary.

"Of course it does," replied their grandfather, "and great flocks of sheep are raised on purpose for their woolly coats."

This seemed very wonderful to the little girls, and they looked at the cosset lamb with new interest, and gently touched his soft, woolly coat.

"We shall have something to tell Aunt Ethel now," said Constance, when the time came for them to start for home. "I guess now we know how all our clothes grow."—Youth's Companion.

THOUGHT PEARLS GLASS.

Necklace Worth $15,000 Stolen, but Value not Appreciated.

A marquise—a member of a prominent aristocratic family—stopping at an hotel in the Rue de la Paix, Paris, France, suddenly discovered that her pearl necklace, worth $15,000, had disappeared from her room.

Suspicion fell on a messenger boy Alfred Paul, who admitted his guilt to the police, but declared that the necklace had been taken from him by his mother. The mother corroborated her son's statements, while expressing astonishment that so much trouble should be made about "a trashy little trinket."

The necklace was no longer in her possession, and Mme. Paul explained that it looked so cheap and tawdry that she had given it to her daughter-in-law, who resides in the Rue secretan.

Mme. Paul junior displayed an equal contempt for the "string of glass beads." She told the police that she had given the necklace to her little girl to wear, but as it was much too wide she had removed about half the beads.

All the missing pearls were found in a box among buttons and hooks and eyes.

The marquise is so delighted at the recovery of her treasure that she has decided not to prosecute the Paul family. Alfred has been discharged with a caution.

ONE SUNDAY IN MONTH.

According to the latest Babylonian discoveries, the ancients had only one Sunday in the month, the fifteenth of full moon day. The Babylonians called this "Sappatti," from which Sabbath is derived. Biblical scholars will recall that Sabbath and new moon are sometimes used as synonyms in the Bible. See Joshua ii. 13; Isaiah i. 13; Kings iv. 23; Amos viii. 5. The same authorities maintain that Jehovah, the God of the Hebrews, was originally the moon, being identical with the Babylonian God Sin. Hence Sinai.

It's a fine thing to make yourself indispensable. As yet no one has ever succeeded in doing it.

He regretted having said so much in the beginning of the conversation, for it almost amounted to a confession that he had seen Robert de Carnoel and Madame Sergent the night before, and the countess had enjoined him to say nothing about Col. Borisoff's prisoner.

"I went yesterday to Rue Joffroy to make inquiries, and was told that the woman when she occupied it was never alone. Her servants wore a livery, and had the appearance of foreigners."

"Nihilists, doubtless. They have returned to Russia until they are needed here. These sinister birds travel incessantly from east to west and west to east."

"A propos of servants," asked Maxime, suddenly, "is Madame Yalta sure of the fidelity of hers?"

"Absolutely sure. All have made part of her household for years, and they worship the countess."

"Even those who are not domestic—the professors, for instance? I know only the fencing-master, whom I saw on one occasion fencing with Madame Yalta. He is a Pole, I believe?"

"The greatest Pole in the world—a political refugee. But Poland does not consort with Nihilism."

"Then you do not admit that he knows the brunette of the Rink?"

"How, diable! could he know her? He never goes out."

"Nor M. de Carnoel either?"

"Still less. May I ask, my dear Doriges, the meaning of all these questions?"

"Oh, nothing. I fancied I had seen him, a long time ago, dressed as a gentleman, and escorting Madame Sergent. I was mistaken."

"Assuredly," said Villagos, who had listened with close attention while affecting indifference. "I might lay a wager you were thinking of this reiter when you alluded to the possibility of a battle at the damsel's. You thought he had followed her to her present abode."

"I confess I had some such idea, but I have it no longer," said Maxime, quickly.

A sudden flash passed through the eyes of the doctor, and from the change in his countenance a physiognomist would have divined that he had just come in possession of a proof long and skillfully sought of a fact which had for him great importance.

"Then," he said gaily, "you relinquish the intention to arm yourself to the teeth for our expedition to-night?"

"Oh, I am not afraid," said Maxime, who had caught the somewhat satirical meaning of the doctor, "and shall go unarmed, even should this Kardiki constitute Madame Sergent's body-guard."

"I do not cast any doubt on your courage, believe me, but when one

"It is too late. It would be useless to retract before Alice. She would not listen to you."

"She will be compelled to yield to the evidence. I have the proof that M. de Carnoel is the accomplice, and perhaps the lover, of a woman who took part in the theft of the safe. I begin by a confession that will astonish you. The theft of the colonel's casket and the fifty thousand francs was preceded by another, which Vignory and I ascertained."

"And you did not tell me?"

"Vignory wished to do so. I opposed it. One Wednesday evening we had dined together, and came to pass the evening at your house. We saw a light in the office, and went in. You will be amazed to learn what I found there—the hand of a woman caught in mechanism which defends the safe."

"A hand! What absurdity are you telling me?"

"Yes, a hand which the accomplice of the thief had cut off. I took into my head to discover alone the owner of the hand."

"That is just like you; but how could Vignory countenance this folly? His duty was to give me warning, and his silence was inexcusable."

"It was that I almost forced him to it."

"A beautiful reason. He was my employe, and has proved false to me. I shall never forgive him."

At this moment an office-boy appeared, who announced that Col. Borisoff wished to speak with M. Doriges on very urgent business. "I have not time," replied the banker, impatiently.

"I beg pardon, uncle," said Maxime. "Will you do me the favor to receive Col. Borisoff, and to allow me to be present? I shall not be de trop, for I am sure he comes to speak of your former secretary."

"The colonel has an important account with me. It is more probable he comes on business."

"The business that occupies him just now is not an affair of money," said Maxime, with confidence, "and I answer for it the conversation will turn solely to M. de Carnoel. If you will permit me to remain you will learn much more quickly what I have yet to tell, and I, perhaps, shall find out some things of which I am still ignorant."

"Very well if I am compelled to ask you to go out, you will wait for me in my chamber, and we will resume our conversation. Ask Col. Borisoff to walk in," he said to the office-boy.

In another moment the door opened and the colonel entered.

"Pardon me, sir," he said, "if I have insisted upon being received. I leave this evening for Russia."

hiliasts, reports of the proceedings of certain persons who emigrated after the last insurrection in Poland. You have not, I suppose, forgotten that it was stolen, and the singular circumstances that accompanied the theft; and you believe me that the accomplice of the thieves was your secretary."

"I think so still. My nephew has the proof."

"Ah!" said the colonel, looking fixedly at Maxime, who remained unmoved.

"I, too," he resumed, "have the proof that M. de Carnoel was in league with the thieves. I have searched for, have found him, arrested and retained him for a long time at my house."

"Without letting me know?" exclaimed the banker.

"It was useless. You had given me carte blanche, and I was free to act in my own way. I endeavored to extort a confession from him, but your ci-devant secretary knew that his friends would not abandon him, and preserved an obstinate silence."

"But what are you going to do with him? If your intention is to deliver him up to the French police, I have nothing to say, but—"

"I shall not deliver him up to any one, for the excellent reason that he has escaped."

"Ma foi!" exclaimed the banker. "I shall not be sorry for him to go elsewhere to get hung."

"He will not be hung anywhere, for they do not hang in France, and he has, I believe, no intention of quitting it. He is in Paris, and perhaps not far from the Rue de Suresnes. It was to make this known, that I called upon you."

"I am very much obliged to you, colonel," stammered the banker. "I shall take my precautions."

"You would do well to do so, for I am satisfied he will attempt to introduce himself into your house. I received yesterday the visit of a Russian who represented himself as sent by the chief of the political police, and who succeeded by a gross stratagem in effecting the liberation of M. de Carnoel. This morning a letter from St. Petersburg enlightened me as to the events of the night. The man was a Nihilist in disguise."

"I was sure of it!"

WOES OF WOMANHOOD

Weakness and Suffering Banished by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are good for men and women, and growing boys and girls, but they are good in a special way for women. At special times a woman needs a medicine to enrich and regulate her blood supply, or her life will be one round of suffering. That is when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are worth their weight in gold, for they actually make new blood. There is not a month in her life from fifteen to fifty that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a boon to every woman. They help the growing girl safely over the critical time when her blood is overtaxed by new demands. To the woman of middle life they bring relief and bring her strength for her time of change.

ONE WOMAN'S STATEMENT

TELLS HER SUFFERING SISTERS TO USE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

They Proved a Blessing to Her When Her Pains and Weakness Were Almost More Than She Could Bear.

St. George, Man., May 30 (Special).—Hoping to save her sister women in the West from pains and aches which come at the critical times in a woman's life, Mrs. Arsene Vinet of this place has given the following statement for publication:—

"I have brought up a large family and have always enjoyed good health until the last two years. I am fifty-four years of age and at the critical time of life that comes to every woman, I had pains in my right hip and shoulder. I could not lie down two minutes at a time without suffering the greatest agony. Sometimes I awakened with a feeling as if one had laid a piece of ice on my head. Another time it would be a burning pain under the left shoulder."

"I took many medicines but could get no relief, till reading of cures of similar cases to my own by Dodd's Kidney Pills, led me to try them. They did wonders for me."

"I want all women to know what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. The woman who has sound Kidneys is safeguarded against nine-tenths of the suffering that makes life a burden to the women of Canada."

ESKIMO'S SNOW HOUSE.

How It is Built—The Peculiar Spiral Arch.

The Eskimo vault is a true dome; it exerts no outward thrust and requires no temporary scaffolding. It is also unique in that its material is not brick or stone but snow, says the Scientific American.

The construction is used for the beehive shaped winter houses of these so-called savages and is spiral in plan. A row of blocks is first laid on the ground in a circle—or more exactly a polygon. Each of these has a slightly slant top and each thus raises its surface a little beyond the last, until when the circle is completed the gap in height between the last and first blocks gives the thickness for the following courses. In these the upper and lower surfaces of each block are parallel, as in a brick, but the gradual upward trend given by the first course is of necessity maintained.

In each successive round the snow bricks are leaned inward more by having their lower surfaces sliced off to a bevel. If set squarely end to end they would before long lean inward so far that they would tumble. For this reason the end of the block last laid is cut at an angle. The next following block has the joining end slanted at the reverse angle. Thus

Maxime, who had caught the same what satirical meaning of the doctor, "and shall go unarmed, even should this Kardiki constitute Madame Sergent's body-guard."

"I do not cast any doubt on your courage, believe me, but when one carries a revolver he is always tempted to make use of it, and I do not wish to create a disturbance. It is agreed, then, I will meet you at midnight at the round point of the Champs-Elysees. Permit me now to take leave of you; I have ten patients to see this morning."

Maxime extended his hand to the doctor, and made no effort to detain him.

"A propos of patients," resumed M. Villagos, "the countess has gone into the country to-day. It is cold and raining, but it matters nothing to her. I have done my best to deter her, but without success."

"It is strange," murmured Maxime, "she said nothing of her intention yesterday."

"Because this beautiful idea came in her sleep, and this morning she wrote to announce to me that she should start at nine o'clock."

This unforeseen absence of Madame Yalta deranged Maxime's plans. He had, however, enough to occupy the day—three persons to see, his cousin, his friend, and his uncle.

He made straight for Rue de Sureres, and was not a little surprised to be informed by the concierge Deulevant that M. Dorgeres had sent for him, and was awaiting him in his office. He found the banker promenading the room in evident agitation.

"What have I done, my dear uncle?" asked Maxime, but slightly intimidated.

"Very wrong, I can tell you. You have assured my daughter that the scoundrel she dotes upon has been unjustly accused. Do you know what has been the result of this foolish talk? She has declared that she will not marry Vignory, and, moreover, that she will not marry at all. If she persists in this resolution, you may boast of having embittered her existence and mine. I will not speak of your friend, whose hopes you have dashed with the same blow. But I ask why you have, with reckless levity, destroyed the future of your cousin. Is this your gratitude to me for having treated you like a son?"

"I was wrong, I acknowledge it, and I came this morning to tell you of the steps I meant to take to replace things where they were when I spoiled them by my folly."

son to walk in, he said to the office-boy.

In another moment the door opened and the colonel entered.

"Pardon me, sir," he said, "if I have insisted upon being received. I leave this evening for Russia, and must speak with you before my departure."

"At your service, colonel. Monsieur is my nephew, but if you desire to be alone with me—"

"I have had the honor to meet M. Maxime Dorgeres," said the colonel, slowly, "and congratulate myself upon finding him here. If I had not I should have begged you to send for him. You guess, perhaps," he went on, "the cause which obliges me suddenly to leave Paris?"

"I confess I do not," replied the banker.

"You have not, then, read the morning papers?"

"Not yet. I have been busy this morning."

"Then you do not know that rascals at St. Petersburg have attempted the life of the emperor, my master?"

"What, again?"

"This time they tried to blow up the Winter Palace. The emperor escaped miraculously, but brave soldiers have perished."

"It is abominable," said the banker, earnestly. "I suppose this crime was the work of those bandits whom you call Nihilists."

"There is no doubt of it. The sect has declared war on the government and on society. It is the right and duty of the government to defend its sacred interest, and it calls upon all its servants upon whose devotion it can count. I am of these, and I go."

"My best wishes accompany you, colonel. I exorcise the enemies of family and property," said M. Dorgeres, with visions of the red republic before his eyes. "You wish, doubtless, to withdraw the funds entrusted to me. I will make arrangements for you to do so this very day."

"Thank you, sir. But I have something more interesting to speak of than the regulating of an account."

"Speak, colonel. I cannot guess its nature, but—"

"Have you ever wondered why I have resided in Paris for two years past?" asked Borisoff, abruptly.

"I suppose it was for your pleasure."

"You are mistaken, sir. I was here to watch over the Nihilists."

"We have them amongst us!" exclaimed the banker.

"Almost as many as in Switzerland. Their chiefs keep themselves prudently beyond our frontiers, and it is in foreign parts that they organize the plots which endanger our country."

"Then the Russian government has good reason to have their criminal procedures watched by its diplomatists."

"The diplomatists do not suffice for the task. I am not attached to the Russian embassy. I represent the political police of the empire."

"The police!" repeated M. Dorgeres, somewhat nonplussed.

"Yes. I have no further reason to hide it, since I leave France never to return. The casket which I deposited with you contained papers of the highest importance,—the list of those associated with Ni-

Pink Pills are not a boon to every woman. They help the growing girl safely over the critical time when her blood is overtaxed by new demands. To the woman of middle life they bring relief and bring her strength for her time of change. And during the thirty odd years that lie between Dr. Williams' Pink Pills fill a woman's life with the happiness of health, giving her strength and energy for every function. A woman's surest protection against all the ills that come to her because of her sex, is to set her blood right at once by a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—and then to keep the blood right by taking the Pills occasionally. Mrs. Eliza Clouthier, St. Jerome, Que., is one of the many unfortunate sufferers restored to health by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "It would be difficult for me to say how much I suffered. I was tormented by headaches and backaches; my appetite failed and I wasted away to such an extent that I was unable to do housework. I was constantly taking medicine, but it did not help me any. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I procured a couple of boxes. By the time these were done I felt some improvement, and thus encouraged I continued the use of the Pills, gaining strength day by day, until after I had taken six or seven boxes. I was again well and strong, and I have since continued in the best of health. I can strongly recommend these Pills to all weak and ailing women."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SOME SUPERSTITIONS.

Bub a cat's back the wrong way, and if you see the sparks it is a sign of cold weather.

When you hear the first frogs in the spring you may know the frost is out of the ground.

In France it is believed that the settling of a white pigeon upon a chimney is a sign of speedy death for some one in the house.

There is a superstition among the negroes of the south that to meet a frog is a lucky incident, indicating that the one thus favored is about to receive money from some unexpected quarter.

DON'T DRUG CHILDREN.

When you give your child a so-called "soothing" medicine you are not curing its sickness. You are merely drugging it into temporary insensibility. The so-called soothing medicines contain opiates, and an overdose may kill the child. When you give little ones Baby's Own Tablets you have the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine is safe. And you have the word of thousands of grateful mothers that this medicine will promptly cure all minor ailments of childhood. Mrs. Alphonse Roy, Scott Junction, Que., says: "My little one was weak and sickly and used to cry day and night, but since giving him Baby's Own Tablets he has thrived splendidly, and is as good-natured and happy as I could wish." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

squarely end to end they would be before long lean inward so far that they would tumble. For this reason the end of the block last laid is cut at an angle. The next following block has the joining end slanted at the reverse angle. Thus it fits in behind the preceding and is prevented by it from slipping inward.

As the house grows the circles become smaller, until at last only an irregular polygonal opening is left. This is filled with a wedge shaped block cut to shape. It is, however, not a keystone, as the remainder of the structure supports itself.

The blocks of firm snow are usually dressed outside and handed for placing to the man on the inside. The last block he holds up with one hand, slices to shape with his ivory knife in the other and drops into position. He is then entirely enclosed in the vault. Only after the house itself is entirely completed does he cut out the low door, which to keep out the cold as much as possible is only big enough to crawl through.

A long, low tunnel is then built in front of the door to break the force of the Arctic's icy blasts. Even the window is present. A small aperture is cut out over the door and filled with a pane of clear, thin ice. All that is omitted is the flue or chimney. Whatever heat is produced by the seal oil lamps is wanted inside, warmth being a more serious necessity in the climate than ventilation or freedom from smoke.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE DEAF.

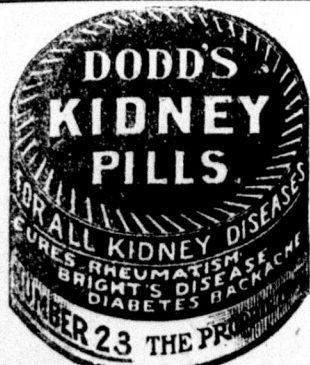

A celebrated New York Aurist has been selected to demonstrate to deaf people that deafness is a disease and can be rapidly and easily cured in your own home.

He proposes to prove this fact by sending to any person having trouble with their ears a trial treatment of his new method absolutely free. We advise all people who have trouble with their ears to immediately address Dr. Edward Gardener, Suite 914, No. 49 West Thirty-third street, New York City, and we wish to assure them that they will receive by return mail, absolutely free, a "Trial Treatment."

"I have discovered a great labor-saving device." "I always said you were a genius. What is it?" "I am going to marry Miss Bullion, the heiress."

The healthy glow disappearing from the cheek and moaning and restlessness at night are sure symptoms of worms in children. Do not fail to get a bottle of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; it is an effectual medicine.

A young man who had just married suggested to his wife that they should argue some question fully and frankly every morning. This, he thought, would help them to gain a fuller insight into each other's nature, thus making for increased happiness. The first question happened to be, "Can a woman dress on $20 a year?" He took the affirmative. And when last seen he was rushing upstairs to take shelter in the garret, and she was following with a broom.

MONTREAL AND QUEBEC.

A veritable edition de luxe among railroad pamphlets has been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System to proclaim amongst tourists the glories of the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The brochure is beautifully printed and generally arranged in the artistic style of earlier days, when the ornamentation of a volume was regarded as an important incident to its presentation of reading matter. It gives an interesting description of the two most interesting cities in Canada, with many illustrations from photographs. Sent free to any address. Apply to Mr. J. D. The World is Full of Pain.—The

BETWEEN THE TWO.

One day a drill-sergeant in the Army had a number of recruits to drill, and wanted the married men separated from the single ones, so he formed them in a line, and gave the word of command:

"Single men advance, and married men fall back in the rear."

All took their positions except one, an Irishman, who stood still. The sergeant asked the reason why he had not moved, but no answer came from Pat.

"Come, my man, are you married?"

"No," replied Pat.

"Then you are single."

"No."

"Then what are you?"

"I am courting Sally."

The sergeant collapsed

CURED HER KIDNEY.

Mrs. John Pettigrew, of Central Economy, N.S., was practically helpless from rheumatism.

She could not stoop, and her limbs ached so that it was torture for her to be up and around the house.

As Mrs. Pettigrew put it, "I was all crippled up. I saw Gin Pills advertised and sent for some, and after taking only two boxes, am a different woman. Gin Pills are the only things that helped me, and I cannot say too much for them."

The change of dietary that comes with spring and summer has the effect in weak stomachs of setting up inflammation, resulting in dysentery and cholera morbus. The abnormal condition will continue if not attended to and will cause an exhaustive drain on the system. The best available medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It clears the stomach and bowels of irritants, counteracts the inflammation and restores the organs to healthy action.

SUDAN RAT'S FOOD.

During the season of drouth in the arid parts of the Sudan the jerboa (a small jumping rat), lives entirely on preserved melons. He bites off the melon just as it is ripe and digs away the sand from under it, so that it sinks below the level of the ground. The wind soon covers it, and the melon is thus preserved until the jerboa is ready to eat it. One jerboa will bury 40 melons in a season.

A Medical Need Supplied.—When a medicine is found that not only acts upon the stomach, but is so composed that certain ingredients of it pass unaltered through the stomach to find action in the bowels, then there is available a purgative and a cleanser of great effectiveness. Parnee's Vegetable Pills are of this character and are best of all pills. During the years that they have been in use they have established themselves as no other pill has done.

THE DEBT OF FRANCE.

It Now Amounts to Seven Billion Dollars.

Alarm at the formidable growth of the public debt of France, its departments, and the colonies is increasing. Auguste Gervais, Senator of the Department of the Seine, has already sounded a warning.

The debt now amounting to more than $7,000,000,000 and exceeding that of any other country, he says, is too easily lost sight of by the common people. They should remember that the interest and other annual charges to which it subjects them exceed $300,000,000, or one-quarter of the total Government expenses, and that the debt itself is rapidly increasing.

From the total, as estimated, are expressly excluded both the capital of the annuities payable by the State, amounting to about $2,000,- 000,000, and some $30,000,000 which the State owes to railway companies for lines recently purchased.

Pills for Nervous Troubles.—The stomach is the centre of the nervous system, and when the stomach suspends healthy action the result is manifest in disturbances of the nerves. If allowed to persist, nervous debility, a dangerous ailment, may ensue. The first consideration is to restore the stomach to proper action, and there is no readier remedy for this than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Thousands can attest the virtue of these pills in curing nervous disorders.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE EXPRESS.

DEAR SIR,—In your column of the last issue enumerating the honors distributed by the Bay Quinte Conference to members of the Napanee District you omitted the most significant of all, viz, the election of W. F. Hall on the General Board of Missions. This is the most important board in the Methodist Church, administering annually about $600,000.00 and with duties, responsibilities and revenue ever increasing. Mr. Hall has been elected on this board for the quadrennial, beginning now his twenty-sixth year. A case without a parallel in this or any other conference, with one exception.

Such an honor to a townsman should find a place in a deliberate enumeration of honors. Kindly give it its merited place and oblige.

Yours, etc.,

G. W. McCALL.

A MAGNIFICENT DONATION.

Over a year ago the Rev. Father O'Connor placed an order with the well known firm of Messrs. Mayer and Co. Munich, Germany, for a set of stations of the Holy Way of the Cross in oil painting for St. Patrick's Church Napanee.

These paintings, the work of the best artists in Munich, the centre of fine art in Germany, costing with their handsome oak frames over eleven hundred dollars, arrived in Napanee last week and are the gift of Mrs. A. McNeil. These magnificent stations, fourteen in all, and truly devotional works of art will represent special events, as recorded in the bible, that took place on that sorrowful journey of Our Lord from the house of Pilate to the hill of Calvary, where the Saviour of the world consummated man's redemption, and are intended to enliven the faith, hope and love of the faithful in the sufferings and death that sin caused and love prompted the Divine Redeemer to undergo.

The stations will be solemnly blessed and erected by His Grace Archbishop Gauthier on Friday the 24th of June next in the evening. Father Ethelbert O.F.M. the eloquent Franciscan will deliver the sermon for the occasion.

AN AGE OF LUXURY.

Dress and Novelties In Food Now Objects of Greatest Importance.

Of late years, writes Lady Violet Greville, in an English publication, dress has acquired extraordinary importance. People who dressed as a necessity of their station now make dress an aim in itself. A dandy might have possessed a wardrobe full of coats, or, like the late Panmure Gordon, cherished an indulgence in 100 pairs of boots, but these were the exception, and were regarded as eccentricities. The amount of suits required by the average man now cannot be counted on the fingers. There are lounge suits and dress suits, fur coats and frock coats, dinner jackets and smoking suits, motor, golf, shooting and fishing costumes, each of which requires waistcoats, stockings and boots to match. With a woman it is even worse. Boxes enough to load a cab are required for each week-end visit, and the same dress cannot be worn twice. Our grandmothers bought lace and furs when they were married to last them their life, but the constant changes of fashion CENTREVILLE.

There is every prospect of a large hay and grain crop in this part just now. Hay is now already advanced and will be fit to cut in a week or so.

J. M. Lochhead had a bee on Monday tearing down his old barn and sheds. His new one will not be ready to raise for a couple of weeks.

John Dillon an aged resident of this part for the past ten or twelve years, but formerly of Chippewa, passed away on Saturday afternoon. The funeral which took place on Monday to the R. C. church was largely attended, the procession being over a mile long. Deceased was born in Ireland about seventy-four years ago and is survived by a wife and grown up family of four sons and four daughters. His death was due to a complication of diseases.

Our foot-ball club since it met defeat here by the Moscow boys, are practicing hard to regain their lost laurels when they meet again.

YARKER.

June 11.—Present appearances indicate an abundant hay and clover crop. The grains are looking well.

The Methodist Sabbath school social has been called off.

Quite a number here are now using a new chicken coop. The exceptions are few that are not into poultry in Yarker.

The Holiness Movement has been holding camp meeting services here for the past week.

The services will be continued during the present week. Yarker has been selected as a permanent place for its summer camp meetings. The property adjacent to the church known as the baseball field has been purchased by the Movement for the campground. This property will be put in good shape and cottages erected for living purposes during the time of camp meeting. Yarker being a junction point is easily reached from all points by rail and the campground is only a few feet from the station.

The township road outfit is now at Yarker putting the road in good shape with gravel.

DEATHS.

TRIMBLE.—At Napanee, on Sunday, June 12th, 1910, Rose Anne Walsh, relict of the late Thomas Trimble.

Why Savages Turn In Their Toes.

In the first place, the foot naturally takes that position when it has never been confined by boots or the ank—distorted by high heels. Convenience is also on the side of the natural position of the foot in the case of the savage, for he has to do much walking through long grass and undergrowth in forests. Consequently his progress would be much impeded if he turned his toes out to catch these obstacles instead of brushing them aside and outward, as he now does. Lastly, the savage uses his foot much more as a help to his hands than we do, and it is obvious that in doing this he must turn his toes in.

The Herring Line.

A senator apropos of fame said at a Washington luncheon:

"What is fame, after all? Kipling when he lived in Brattleboro took a trip to Montpelier, and the first evening he came down to the hotel dining-room he overheard this dialogue between two waiters:

"First Waiter—Do you know who that is, George?

"Second Waiter—No. Who is it?

"First Waiter—That's the celebrated Kipperin.

"Second Waiter—What's he done?

"First Waiter—Hanged if I know. Fish line, ain't it?"—Washington Star.

Looking Ahead.

Josephine, aged ten, has a decided lisp. She is also very fond of attending the matinee. The other day she was giving a spirited story of the play to Marion, who was aged nine.

"My mamma says it isn't good for little girls to go to the theatre," said Marion, with an air of self righteousness. "I'm not ever going till I'm eighteen."

"Hump!" retorted Josephine without any hesitation. "Th'pose you die when you're theventeen, then you'll be thtuing!"

Basket-Making Venture.

The initial stage of what may prove to be a new and important Natal industry has been reached in Maritzburg where a company has been floated to promote basket-making. Some 12,000 osier cuttings have been planted on a property near Edendale, and it is intended to import skilled artisans from England to teach the natives the art of basket-making according to modern methods.

ing and fishing costumes, each of which requires waistcoats, stockings and boots to match. With a woman it is even worse. Boxes enough to load a cab are required for each weekend visit, and the same dress cannot be worn twice. Our grandmothers bought lace and furs when they were married to last them their life, but the constant changes of fashion necessitate endless expenditure. Every bride in society has her diamond tiara and her sables, every shop girl wears her fur boa and carries her muff. Each year furs grow dearer, and each year women spend more on these accessories to dress. The average expenditure of a well-dressed woman is about three times that of her mother, who probably could have afforded more.

Luxury in food, too, increases. Though we may not indulge in such long and heavy dinners as our ancestors, we eat more delicately, more expensively of forced strawberries, plover's eggs, early asparagus and petitis poussins, etc., and require better cooks. Restaurants and hotels vie with each other in introducing novelties and out-of-season luxuries, and the standard of the gourmet grows higher every day. The kind of meal that once satisfied a fastidious man about town, the plain dinner that was so popular with the guests of Charlie Paris, the wine merchant, or Sir Henry Thompson, the surgeon, a bit of codfish, a beefsteak and onions, toasted cheese and a woodcock, would be considered very poor fare now to put before one's guests, who do not want to taste wine, or enjoy the flavor of claret, but to drink champagne all through dinner, and smoke cigarettes directly after.

Dirty Patagonia.

"Patagonians are not giants, as some have supposed and as the geographies teach," said a man who has traveled. "They are large in comparison with the other South American natives, that is all. Everything is relative, you know. But they are very fat. That is why they can stand the cold so well. I have seen Patagonian men and boys running around unclad while I was wrapped in warm garments, with the snow falling upon them in quantities and the wind blowing bitterly. They are kept warm by their fat and dirt. Patagonia is one of the dirtiest places imaginable. Don't go there if you hate dirt. That is my advice to all who contemplate a journey to the jumping off place of South America."

PLEASANT VALLEY.

June 10.—Frost has done considerable damage to gardens here. Some of the farmers talk of shipping their cream as it pays much better than sending to cheese factory, and the farmer has the skimmed milk for his calves besides.

Frederick Ellerbeck is building a kitchen and woodhouse. Messrs. O. and John Kerr have the job.

A pleasing event took place on June 8th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ellerbeck, formerly of this place, now of Tessier, Saskatchewan, where their only daughter, Jennie, was united in matrimony to John Coulter, a prosperous business man of that town.

Mrs. Jane Ellerbeck is attending meetings at Adolphustown, conducted by the brethren.

Visitors: Miss Lillian E. Ellerbeck at I. Bradford's; Mrs. E. Bradford and W. Bradford at E. Hughes, on Sunday; Mrs. S. Ward and Mrs. Hawley called on friends Sunday last; Mr. and Mrs. E. Hughes spent Sunday at Petworth; D. Leslie at George Barr's; A. Charbonneau placed a fine monument in Moscow cemetery to the memory of the late Stanley Kerr; E. Vanderhoof, Westport, was at George Barr's.
